

Miss Hearst's Release Possible

SLA Promises To Tell Details

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The exact time and place of Patricia Hearst's release will be disclosed within 72 hours, a communique bearing the signature of the Symbionese Liberation Army said Tuesday.

The kidnap victim's father said he was convinced the message was genuine and said "I am sure she will be released."

"Of course I am very pleased," Randolph A. Hearst told newsmen at his suburban Hillsborough home. "I have been sure all along she was well and when they say they'll release her, I believe it."

Enclosed with the communique was half of a driver's license with the signature "Patricia Hearst." The state Department of Motor Vehicles said in Sacramento that details on that portion match details on its records of Miss Hearst's license — including the initials of the clerk who processed and issued the license.

The communique, wrapped in a dozen long-stemmed red roses, was delivered to the biweekly underground newspaper, the Phoenix, on Tuesday morning by a florist. It arrived 17 hours late because the florist's car broke down Monday night.

The communique does not make clear when the 72-hour countdown was to begin.

The section of license enclosed in the communique has Miss Hearst's correct height, weight, marital status and birth date.

"We believe the driver's license is Patty's and we believe the communique is a genuine one," Hearst said after seeing the license.

"I was so happy to see the half of Patty's driver's license, said Catherine Hearst, Patricia's mother. "And I hope to get the other half with Patty along with it, because I believe the SLA certainly has lived up to everything they've said so far and I have every reason to believe they'll continue to live up to their word."

There was no way to confirm that the communique was authentic, but it followed the pattern and style of previous communications which authorities have accepted as coming from the SLA.

The communique was addressed to Phoenix Editor John Bryan and was signed, "I I Unt 4. Gen Field Marshal Cin SLA."

Earlier Tuesday, the Hearst Corp. said its $4 million offer of free food for the poor will be withdrawn if Miss Hearst is not released within one month. The corporation said it had placed the money in escrow on Tuesday, and that it would be released for a food giveaway if Miss Hearst were released unharmed before May 3.

In a handwritten open letter to her sister published by the family-owned San Francisco Examiner, Vicki Hearst said:

"I need my sister. The SLA says they are acting in response to the needs of 'the people.' Well, I'm part of the people and I have a very great need."

"I want to assure you that Dad has done everything in his power to help you," Vicki said of her father Randolph in the open letter to Patricia.

In the letter, Vicki said her sister is a human being, entitled to a right to live and that if the SLA denies her that right "they commit a crime not only against this family, but against humanity."

The letter, signed "All my love, Vicki," is to be followed on Wednesday by publication in the Examiner of a letter to Patricia from another of her sisters, Ann, 18.

Voters Say No To Fluoridation

Opponents of fluoridation scored an apparent clean sweep in special-issue balloting on the preventive dental health measure in Nebraska municipal elections Tuesday.

Voters in fifteen towns, headed by Fremont, were known by The Star to have faced the fluoridation issue on their municipal ballot. In each case voters exempted their towns from legislature-ordered mandatory fluoridation, mostly by overwhelming margins.

In Fremont, voters turned down fluoridation by a margin of 3,288-1,357.

The results — especially of the Fremont election — were a defeat for the Nebraska Dental Association, which authored legislation passed by the legislature last year making municipal fluoridation mandatory by Jan. 1, 1975.

Towns were given the chance to exempt themselves at the polls if they could get the issue on the ballot before Jan. 1, 1975, by the petition process. More are expected to place the issue on their May primary ballots.

The votes by towns

Alvo 55-8; Bloomington 58-7; Bradshaw 90-12; Clearwater 104-20; Comstock 40-9; Edison 45-5; Elm Creek 165-72; Fremont 3,288-1,357; Malmø 38-5; Mason City 75-8; Merna 168-22; Miller 61-4; Oxford 242-43; Rosalie 66-8.

Winslow voters also defeated fluoridation by "at least two-to-one," according to Mrs. Charles Haase, one of the election judges there. The ballots, however, are locked up and the totals won't be known till Monday night, she said.

New Judge May Get Courtroom

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Deputy County Atty. Janice Gradwohl is the city's new Municipal Court judge, but she has no courtroom to call her own.

And in attempt to rectify that situation, the County-City Building Committee Tuesday authorized the advertising for bids to remodel the building's second floor personnel department into the fourth courtroom.

But, not without some flack from County Board Chairman Robert Colin.

Colin contended that construction of a second county court should have just as high a priority as construction of a new Municipal Courtroom.

He also indicated he opposed moving the city personnel department down the stairs and across the hall to the county side of the building.

Personnel is slated to move into first floor Motor Vehicles Department.

And in the continuing game of who goes where in the County-City Building, Motor Vehicles is moving out, location unknown.

City Council Chairwoman Helen Boosalis asked Colin where the city was to house the new judge if there was not a courtroom.

Gov. J. James Exon appointed Gradwohl to the post Tuesday.

Not only is the new location for the Motor Vehicles Department undecided, so is the question of whom would pay for office rent.

Commissioner Jan Gauger reported that Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas has ruled that the "statutes are silent" on whether the county is required to pay the rent.

In a letter to the committee, Douglas said since the department's employees are state workers, "it is a simple presumption that the state would find office space for its employees and pay for that space."

A plan to make room on the second floor for a second county court and needed space for the county attorney's office was scuttled by Colin and Commissioner Kenneth Bourne.

The majority of the committee, Commissioner Jan Gauger, Councilman Steve Cook, Boosalis and Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf recommended that the Superintendent of Schools Office be relocated in a space outside the building to make way for the two offices.

Bourne voted against the move. Colin abstained. The two comprise the majority of the County Board, which would be responsible for ordering the relocation.

Bourne said Supt. of Schools Glenn Turner would be "furious about moving out of here."

The veteran commissioner contended that Turner agreed to remain in office another year and that within that time the office may be abolished.

Boosalis maintained the issue should be decided about "what is best for the entire county, not just one person."

Cook voiced regret that the commissioners could not agree on the move, "but it's not our business," he said.

In other business Cook reported that the County-City Building's new directional signs should be delivered during the week of May 20th.

Exon Appeals To People To Halt 'Spending Spree'

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday called on Nebraska citizens to tell their state senators that "it is time to call a halt to the wild spending spree" underway in the Legislature.

Exon said the Unicameral's present and projected level of spending is $23 million higher than that recommended in his 1974-75 state budget.

Senators "seem to have a deaf ear when we talk to them directly," the governor told newsmen.

"Maybe the people can get to their legislators. Maybe they will listen to them, if not to the governor," Exon called a late afternoon press conference to send his message to the people.

Whereas he recommended $309 million in spending (not counting federal and cash funds) during the coming fiscal year, Exon said, the Legislature appears to be on the verge of approving a $332 million spending package.

That is not only $23 million larger than his spending plan, the governor said, but it would produce "a deficit of nearly $26 million as of July 1, 1975, if present state tax rates are maintained."

Exon said "the spending spree is in addition to the already infamous tax increase bill" approved by the Legislature in the form of LB772, the measure increasing state aid to public schools.

That bill, which would equalize state and local tax support for the schools, increasing the sales and income tax funding while reducing local property tax support, would hike state tax rates next year.

The estimated increase is a one percent sales tax rate, and an additional personal income tax rate of 4% or 5%.

Exon said he can "assure" senators he "will be using his line item veto powers" in considering their budget bills.

But, before he undertakes that task, he said, he hopes the Legislature "will come to grips with reality" and reduce projected spending.

Exon declined to specify where he would make the budget cuts, nor would he say whether the reductions would be the same if senators had restored the personal income tax rate from 11% to 13% for calendar 1974.

Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings, chairman of the Appropriations Committee and a Republican candidate for governor, has been providing his colleagues with "improper figures" on spending, Exon said.

They ignore the 5% general fund reserve required by law, the governor said, a figure he estimates now at $14.4 million.

Marvel, he said, is engaged in "a desperate attempt to justify his irresponsible position."

Marvel earlier in the day estimated the cost of Appropriations Committee budget bills, with amendments, at $286 million. Other approved legislation, costing $5½ million, would raise the total present spending level to $292 million, he said.

That compares, Marvel said, to estimated revenue of $290 million.

Prison Plan Still Tangled

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The tangled web in which funding for a new state prison has been trapped for two years drew even tighter Tuesday when the Legislature voted to locate the facility in Omaha, then watched the proposal disappear altogether.

The correction reform snarl highlighted another day of budget debate in which senators completed their work on operational appropriation decisions.

Capital construction budget recommendations were under consideration when the Unicameral adjourned for the day.

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, attempted to add $350,000 to the major construction bill, LB1055, in order to plan, program and design a new medium-minimum security prison to replace the Men's Reformatory.

The Luedtke proposal envisioned a facility with a minimum occupancy of 250 persons, leaving the site undetermined pending completion of the plan.

But Sen. David Stahmer of Omaha, recalling a 3-2 Judiciary Committee recommendation last year to move the prison from Lincoln to Omaha, asked that the Luedtke amendment specify Omaha as the site.

His suggestion was approved on a 19-13 vote, with 12 of the supporting votes coming from Douglas and Sarpy Counties. Seventeen senators did not vote.

Later, after Stahmer further amended the proposal to change the form of funding, Luedtke withdrew his amendment altogether.

"In a few seconds, you have turned around what the Judiciary Committee did over three years time," Luedtke said.

Stahmer's amendments, he said, "completely switched around" his proposal, "and we're right back to studying what we have studied to death already," Luedtke declared.

"You," he told Stahmer, "have successfully confused the issue."

Withdrawal of the amendment left in the bill a $100,000 appropriation to develop a state plan for corrections, with no funding for a new prison.

In its present form, LB1055 requests Gov. J. James Exon to appoint a committee to undertake the study.

The Judiciary Committee previously hammered together a correctional reform plan based on study by outside consultants.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln will present the Legislature Wednesday with a new amendment to provide funding to design a new prison for an unspecified site.

Sen. Richard Fellman of Omaha, who engineered the 3-2 judiciary unit vote for an Omaha site last year, said Omaha is the proper location since most of the inmates come from Douglas County.

In other budget action, senators: —gave 31-2 second stage approval to LB1057, an operational appropriations measure providing nearly $10.9 million in state tax support for the statewide network of technical community colleges.

—handed 27-1 second stage endorsement to LB1059, a 1973-74 deficit budget bill which appropriates more than $1.9 million in state tax support, most of it for the University of Nebraska.

—amended LB1054, the largest operational budget bill, to add $40,900 for the university's Northeast Experiment Station, and clarify an earlier decision which added tuition reduction or tuition waiver funding for the state colleges, including $70,000 at Peru.

Sens. John Cavanaugh III and Eugene Mahoney, both of Omaha, came within two votes of adding $750,000 in LB1057 funding for the Metropolitan Technical Community College area in Omaha.

Needing 25 votes, his motion fell on a 23-17 count.

When only two Lincoln senators supported the motion, Sen. George Syas of Omaha proclaimed: "Let's slaughter Lincoln now."

Prior to advancement, Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings won 27-10 consent to add $250,000 to fund tuition remission scholarships and athletic scholarships at the colleges. They will be distributed on an area population basis.

Stahmer succeeded in adding $180,000 to the deficit bill, LB1059, to help fund the mental retardation regional program in Omaha. The vote was 30-6.

And senators approved, on a 26-12 count, Sen. Orval Keyes' proposal that all NU faculty members receiving more than $10,000 in outside income during the year must report the size and source of the income.

Ailing French President Pompidou Dies

PARIS (AP) — Georges Pompidou, a protégé of Charles de Gaulle and his successor as president of France, died Tuesday of an undisclosed illness. He was 62.

Pompidou had been plagued by illness and there had been speculation about his possible resignation.

The palace refused to give any further details on the death immediately. Newsmen were barred from entering the building.

The president had been spending most of his time in the past two weeks at his private apartment on the St. Louis island in the Seine River. It was assumed he died there, but there was no official confirmation.

Although the cause of death was not disclosed immediately, there had been reports of various ailments, including leukemia or some other form of cancer.

Pompidou became president of France on June 15, 1969, defeating Alain Poher, who had become acting president when De Gaulle resigned after the electorate failed to approve his proposals for government centralization and Senate reform.

De Gaulle died Nov. 10, 1970, and Pompidou declared: "France is a widow."

Under the French constitution, Poher as president of the Senate now takes over the government to organize presidential elections, which must be held in 20 to 35 days. The Constitutional Council, which is charged with officially declaring the presidency vacant, will meet Wednesday.

The palace announcement earlier Tuesday of Pompidou's illness was the second revelation in two weeks that the president was too ill to carry out his duties. Medical sources said two weeks ago that his condition was complicated by hemorrhoids.

Boy's Easter Clothing

Great selection & still time for alterations. Ben Simon's Gateway, Boys' Dept. Adv.

In some of his public appearances he has appeared tired and bloated.

Recently he traveled to the Soviet Union to confer with Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev, but in the last few days he canceled a scheduled spring trip to Japan and put off a planned trip to Bonn to confer with the West German chancellor, Willy Brandt.

There had been speculation about possible new presidential elections during past months. Some potential candidates mentioned were former Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing and the Socialist party secretary general, Francois Mitterand.

Pompidou, without ever having held elected office, was appointed premier in 1962 and as such took a predominant position in domestic economic policies, which often tended to bore him.

He achieved little grassroots popularity in the office until spring of 1968 when he emerged as the only public figure whose stature was not diminished by the student upheaval that hit Paris.

Pompidou's success apparently did not sit well with President Charles de Gaulle, who soon replaced him as premier with Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville.

Less than a year later, De Gaulle resigned and Pompidou on June 15, 1969, won the presidency in a runoff election with Poher.

Although troubled by ill health, Pompidou imposed his own distinctive style on French politics and enjoyed having his personal hand in French foreign policy. He also did not hesitate to change a number of policies of his predecessor.

Donald Nixon Testifies He Rebuffed Vesco Aide

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Nixon testified at the Mitchell-Stans trial Tuesday that he rebuffed an effort by a Robert L. Vesco aide to get a message to his brother, President Nixon, but did suggest that "John Mitchell might be the man to talk to."

"I said there was no way I could do this," the tall, portly Nixon told the jury in U.S. District Court. "It has been my policy ever since my brother has been in politics. I have never taken anything directly to him. Nor have I used that office to any purpose of mine or anyone I ever worked for."

Nixon was expected to be the last major witness for the government at the trial of Mitchell, the onetime attorney general, and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans. They are charged with conspiracy, perjury and obstruction of justice.

Nixon's testimony was in furtherance of the prosecution claim that Mitchell and Stans conspired with others in the obstruction of a Securities and Exchange Commission fraud investigation of Vesco in return for the international financier's secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

President Nixon once said he had Donald Nixon's telephone tapped for security reasons — to protect his brother from people who might try to use him because of his relationship to the President.

Nixon testified at one point: "John Mitchell was the man designated — I never talked to my brother on any matter and John Mitchell was the man I was designated to talk to."

Donald Nixon's son, Donald Jr., 26, has worked for and traveled extensively with Vesco. But his father testified he didn't know whether the younger man still was in Vesco's employ.

Nixon was asked by Asst. United States Attorney James Rayhill about a conversation he had just prior to the 1972 presidential election with Howard Cerny, a legal aide to Vesco and a conspirator in the Mitchell-Stans case. Under the law, a coconspirator is regarded as a member of a conspiracy, although not a defendant in its prosecution.

"Just prior to the election in 1972, Howard Cerny did call me," the 59-year-old Nixon testified, appearing relaxed in the witness chair. "He tried to reach me in California but found me in New York."

"Specifically I don't recall the conversation. When he called me he said he wanted to see me about something important. The main thing he mentioned was that there had been a $200,000 contribution made to my brother's campaign and a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation was in progress and would very likely expose this contribution."

"He thought it would probably happen before the election and he wanted to get this to the President."

There had been prior testimony that the Vesco group sought to sidetrack the SEC probe on the ground that its investigation might lead to embarrassment for President Nixon on the eve of the election.

At this point, Nixon detailed his refusal to take the message to the White House, adding that the contribution had been described to him as made in cash.

F. Donald Nixon

"Did Mr. Cerny indicate the reason for the cash contribution?" Rayhill asked.

"He didn't specifically say why," Nixon replied.

"I made it very plain that I did not want to get involved in any way with anything in the Vesco case," Nixon went on. "I said if he wanted to get the information to the President he certainly should know some people. He had an office in Washington, D.C., and I didn't know why he came to me."

Yablonski Killer Describes Event

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — A confessed killer who provided the first major break in the murder of Joseph "Jock" Yablonski and members of his family told Tuesday how he and two other men stalked their prey.

The plan was to "kill them... leave no witnesses," Claude E. Vealey, 30, testified at the murder trial of former United Mine Workers President W.A. "Tony" Boyle.

Paul Gilly, 42, another of the three gunmen, had testified earlier that he had been told Boyle was behind the plot to assassinate his union rival after defeating him for the UMW presidency.

Vealey, a gasoline station attendant from Cleveland; Gilly, and Aubran W. Martin, 25, were arrested shortly after the Dec. 31, 1969 slayings of Yablonski and his wife and daughter.

Vealey later confessed and pleaded guilty to the crime, testifying in the convictions of the other two triggermen.

Vealey had said the murders were paid for by a man named "Tony."

The government claims Boyle, 72, initiated the plan to kill Yablonski and authorized the expenditure of $20,000 in union funds for the assassination.

Vealey testified that after weeks of stalking Yablonski had failed, he, Gilly and Martin left Cleveland on Dec. 30, 1969, on a mission to kill Yablonski at his rural Clarksville home in southwestern Pennsylvania.

"We didn't know exactly who was in the house, but we figured his wife and daughter were there," Vealey said.

"What was the plan?" special prosecutor Richard A. Sprague asked.

"Kill 'em. Leave no witnesses," he replied.

"Martin was to shoot the girl and I was to shoot Yablonski and his wife. Martin had the .38 (pistol) and I had the rifle."

Under cross-examination by Boyle's attorney, Charles F. Moses, Vealey was asked about alleged differences in his testimony about when and how he was hired to murder Yablonski and the statements he had made at trials of previous defendants.

When Sprague objected, Common Pleas Judge Francis J. Catania said: "Any inconsistencies will have to be resolved by the jury."

Vealey said the Yablonski family was asleep when the men entered the house. Vealey said after Martin fired at the daughter, he (Vealey) pointed his carbine at Yablonski and his wife.

"I pulled the trigger on the carbine and it didn't fire," Vealey testified. "Gilly grabbed it... and got it to fire one shot. Then Martin came over and fired four shots. I took the pistol (from Martin) and reloaded it."

"Joseph Yablonski was making a gurgling sound. I reloaded the pistol and walked into the room. I shot two or three times into Joseph Yablonski to make sure he was dead."

Another witness, Dr. Ernest L. Abernathy of Washington, Pa., a pathologist, repeated testimony he had given in earlier trials about the wounds sustained by members of the Yablonski family.

Gilly repeated his previous testimony that he was hired for the job by his father-in-law, Silous Huddleston, 65, a former president of a UMW local in LaFollette, Tenn.

Gilly, in his second day on the witness stand, said he was first approached about the killing by his wife, Annette, at the request of Huddleston.

Kennedy Reveals Warning Against 'Honest Answer'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Tuesday made public a cable from Ambassador Graham Martin warning the State Department against "an honest and detailed answer" to questions the senator had raised about U.S. policy in South Vietnam.

Martin's March 21 cable said it would be "the height of folly" to give a detailed reply to Kennedy.

In a Senate speech, Kennedy said the cable "should outrage every member of this body and every member of the Congress."

He commended Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for his "candor and responsiveness" in rejecting Martin's advice.

Kissinger wrote Kennedy instead saying that although the United States has no written bilateral agreement with the Saigon regime, "we have thus committed ourselves very substantially, both politically and morally."

In releasing Kissinger's reply Sunday, Kennedy said it distressed him because "it shatters" the hope that we could finally disengage" from direct involvement in Vietnam.

However, in his speech Wednesday, Kennedy praised Kissinger's willingness to respond, adding regret, however, that the secretary's "honesty and willingness to clarify United States policy is not shared by our ambassador in Saigon."

In the cable, labeled "confidential," Martin said "It would be the height of folly to permit Kennedy, whose staff will spearhead this effort (to reduce aid), the tactical advantage of an honest and detailed answer to the questions of substance raised in his letter."

"Any substantive answer," would permit another calculated campaign of distortion that would pre-empt the attention the presentation of the administration's case should receive."

He urged that Kennedy's request be answered with "a very short routine reply" from the assistant secretary of state for congressional relations, Linwood Holton, saying the matter would be covered in forthcoming administration testimony to congressional committees.

"This cable speaks for itself," Kennedy said.

He added that Martin has engaged in "unwarranted interference in field investigations of United States foreign aid expenditures by investigators of the General Accounting Office (GAO)."

Observers Forced To March 20 Miles Barefoot And Ill-Clad

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Two United Nations observers, an American and an Irishman, were forced to march 20 miles barefoot wearing only their underwear to a Syrian military outpost, they said Tuesday.

Syrian authorities said the observers had been mistaken for Israelis, and that the two men were expected to be released from a Damascus hospital soon.

Capt. John J. Holly, 27, a United States Marine from Corning, N.Y., and Capt. James Mortell of Ireland appeared in good spirits.

"We are soldiers and as such have to accept things like this as an occupational hazard," Holly said in an interview. "I would not be a soldier unless I knew that anything could happen."

The U.N. observer force is stationed between Israeli and Syrian troops along the 40-mile cease-fire line in the Golan Heights. The two armies have been fighting every day for the past three weeks with tanks and artillery.

Official sources said the two men were "captured by mistake at 2 a.m. Monday by a Syrian patrol operating behind Israeli lines in the Golan Heights."

Earlier Syrian Defense Minister Gen. Mustafah Tlas said an army patrol "found" the two men wearing civilian clothes and because the weather was bad, mistook them for Israelis.

According to Holly, he and Mortell were sleeping in a U.N. trailer near an Israeli position when an Arab soldier ordered them to get up and then marched them to the Syrian side.

"The soldier obviously took us for Israelis," Holly said. "He spoke only Arabic and we could not identify ourselves. We reached an Arab army position at 8 a.m. and were identified and properly treated. Our feet were badly cut from the long barefoot march. Then we were taken to Damascus for further treatment."

Hospital officials said Holly would be returned to his U.N. observation post in the Golan Heights within four days. Mortell, who had deeper cuts, was expected to spend about two weeks at the hospital.

In New York a U.N. spokesman said Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on Tuesday protested the capture of two observers.

The spokesman told reporters Waldheim made a protest to Syrian Ambassador Haisam Kelani, who "personally expressed regret at the incident" and promised to relay the protest to his government.

The spokesman said Waldheim also expressed concern "at the escalation of the fighting" on the Syrian-Israeli front to Kelani and Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah, whom he called in for successive separate conferences.

Rendezvous With Liner Is Planned

Aboard the Sea Venture (AP) — This Norwegian cruise ship sailed Tuesday from Bermuda for a predawn Atlantic rendezvous with the stalled British luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 to evacuate her 1,630 sweltering passengers. American professional football stars are among the passengers.

The passengers were to be taken off the QE2 in shipboard launches and lifeboats, transferred to this vessel and taken to Bermuda.

The Sea Venture, which ordinarily cruises between New York and Bermuda, sailed southward from the Bermudian port of Hamilton Tuesday with some of her own cruise passengers still aboard and was expected to reach the liner early Wednesday morning.

Crippled by a boiler breakdown since Monday, the Queen Elizabeth 2 was reported drifting about 270 miles southwest of Bermuda and 820 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla.

The passengers and crew were said to be in no danger with the seas calm and the weather clear in the area.

Two Huskers Aboard

Aboard the Sea Venture — Among the stranded football stars were former all-American Nebraska tackle Larry Jacobson, now with the New York Giants and former Husker Ron McDole of the Washington Redskins. Others included coach Hank Stram of the Kansas City Chiefs, quarterback Sonny Jurgenson of the Washington Redskins, center John Schmidt of the New York Jets, Baltimore Colts quarterback Marty Domres, Don Hermann of the New York Giants and center John Schmidt of the New York Jets.

Elazar Resigns

Jerusalem (UPI) — Lt. Gen. David Elazar resigned as Israel's chief of staff Tuesday, staunchly denying charges by a special government commission that he was to blame for his nation's lack of preparation for the October war.

The commission had recommended that Elazar and his chief of military intelligence be fired.

The commission's report cleared Prime Minister Golda Meir and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan of responsibility for alleged failures in meeting the combined Egyptian-Syrian offensive which began Oct. 6 and started the 1973 Middle East War.

Elazar read his letter of resignation to the cabinet and said the findings of the five-member commission constituted an injustice against him. He said he handed over temporary command to Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Hafi, chief of army operations.

now determined that conditions are such that wages and salaries paid in the newspaper industry should be exempted."

"This action is in accordance with our objective to remove controls selectively where conditions permit," he said.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

It's not the kind of thing that will have a frequent effect upon most of us, but the Supreme Court decision upholding the national Bank Secrecy Act is not a blow for individual freedom. It is, in fact, quite the contrary — an erosion of everyone's right of privacy.

Rather than our right of privacy being strengthened, we find it constantly diluted under the guise of some well-meaning thought. In the bank situation, the high court validated a law requiring banks to make reports to the Internal Revenue Service on certain customer transactions.

Among matters the banks will have to report are any transactions of $10,000 or more and the transfer of $5,000 or more out of the country. It is true enough that most of us do not have many $10,000 transactions and few of us are sending $5,000 or more out of the country.

As a matter of fact, this writer has never sent a dime out of the country and cannot see that he ever will. Most of us find that we have enough here in this country to take care of all the bucks we can lay our hands on. Lunch money the day before pay day is satisfaction enough, much less anything left for foreign entanglements.

Still, the reporting requirement is an invasion of the rights of those who, for some reason or other, do send money to other countries. There is a lot of foreign trade even out of Nebraska and that probably involves large amounts of money going to other countries.

Should the person doing business overseas be subjected to this kind of thing, where the government has free access to private financial affairs without any reason, at all? It will be an easy tool for the government to use for harassment purposes and only an idiot would say it will never happen.

If all the Watergate activity of the past has not convinced us that government will improperly use its authority, then we haven't been listening very well. Government regulatory agencies have played an important role in the campaign contribution irregularities of recent years.

Even more damaging, we think, is the requirement for the reporting of all transactions of $10,000 or more. This reporting to the government will involve citizens by the millions and could well be a Niagara of paper work going to the IRS on the activities of business and industry.

Once again, it will provide the IRS with the means of snooping into the private affairs of vast segments of our society. And anyone who thinks that the files of the IRS are held secret has another thought coming.

You may recall that it was only after various strong objections were raised that the Agricultural Department backed off on an administration scheme to open all farm income tax returns to department scrutiny.

Obviously, the IRS information gathered from the banks will be open to law enforcement agencies, since that is the rationale on which the new requirement is based. In that connection, you may remember that the law concerning search and seizure has already been weakened to the point where you can, in essence, be assumed guilty until proven innocent.

Everywhere you look these days, you see the rights of privacy and the right of equal protection of the law being eroded. It is generally done under the mantle of improved law-enforcement but that is not always the way it works.

The crime rate in the country is a most serious matter but we will have lost far more than we might gain if, in the process of fighting it, we sacrifice our constitutional rights and freedoms. The nation collectively is taking these rights and freedoms too much for granted and may well wake up some day to find them all gone.

Teenagers Hard Hit By Scarcity Of Jobs

NEW YORK — Here's one more thing you can add to the growing list of shortages teenage jobs. This year they're going to be scarcer than dollar-a-pound hamburger.

And if the sight of Junior lolling around the house during Easter vacation gives you the glums, roust him out to the nearest employment agency this very minute. Otherwise, you'll have him on the living room couch all summer.

You may anyway. Gas stations are drying up as a traditional work source for teens on vacation. Somewhere in there during the big scare, owners got out of the habit of washing windshields and checking tires. And motorists are so happy to get a full tank, even at 80 cents a gallon, they don't miss the frills the kids usually provide. Hamburger and pizza spots aren't the job havens they used to be, either. People are finding they can save money — despite the skyrocketing cost of food — by eating at home.

Owners of tourist attractions are hedging their bets by signing kids up on a maybe basis. "Maybe" there'll be jobs . . . "if" there's enough gas this summer to bring the vacationers out. Meanwhile, they're cooling it. And worrying a lot.

So is the government. With all its other troubles, a long, hot summer of restless young people on the loose is the last thing the White House needs right now. And it's willing to spend $10 million to avoid it.

This money will set up 178 Youth Conservation Corps camps around the country to keep 5,500 teen-agers from 15 to 18 busy. If they're interested in conservation, have no "serious criminal or anti-social behavior" and move fast, they can earn up to $300 (plus free food and lodging) for eight weeks this summer.

That leaves only another million or so who'll have to rustle up work on their own. And this year they can't count on mowing lawns around the neighborhood. What with the shortage of seed and fertilizer, there might not be all that much grass. And with the shortage of extra cash, what there is will be clipped by the man of the house.

Which brings up another problem the kids will be facing this summer: competition from grownups.

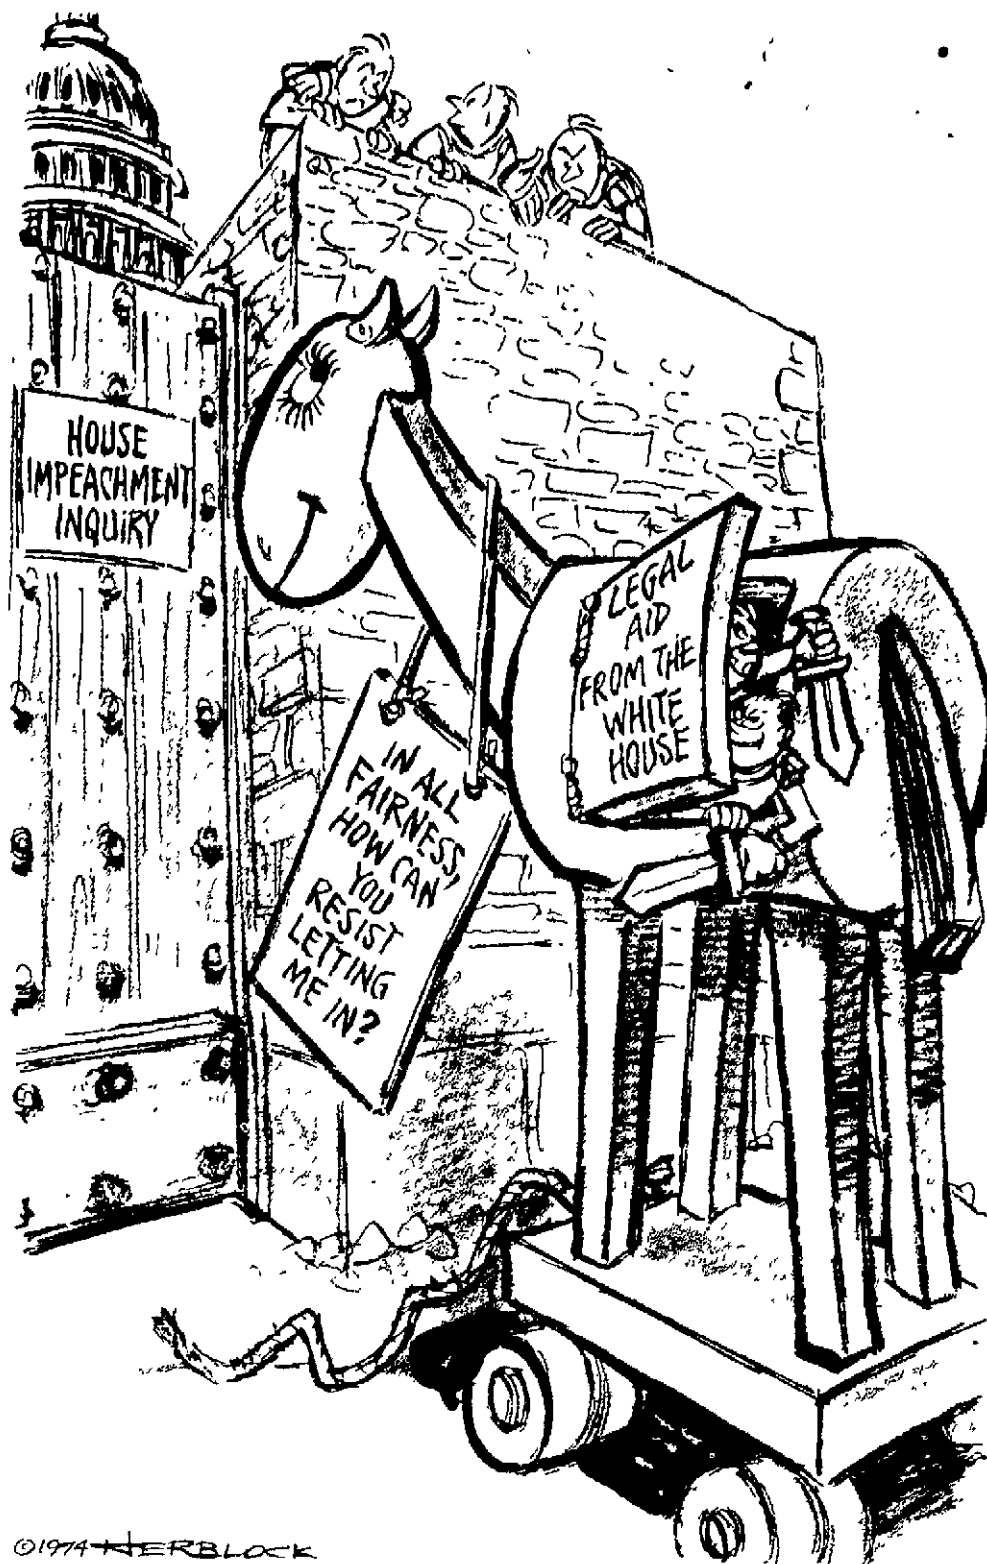

Car washes, supermarkets, clothing stores, laundries, construction firms and drug stores all report they are filling their summer openings with jobless adults. Who, as it turns out, are not particularly choosy about what they do.

One hospital in Boston had to put in extra phones to handle applications for janitors. In a Michigan suburb 75 women showed up for one meter-maid job. A New York food chain says it has 15% more people applying for part-time work at the checkout counter. And many delivery "boys" will never see 30 again.

The saddest part of this whole picture is that college-bound teenagers need to earn more than ever this summer. The average cost of tuition, room and board, books, etc., just went up another 9.4%. That makes higher education almost 36% higher than it was four years ago.

And, along with the scarcity of jobs, there's also a scarcity of college grants and loans. Which is another reason why Junior will have a tough time finding work. Mom and Pop may get there first.

Pieces Of The Same Puzzle

Marvin Nuernberger, executive director of the Lincoln-Lancaster County area's Railroad Transportation Safety District, has suggested that a decision on the Northeast Radial is needed so that plans can be formulated on consolidating railroad tracks in the area where the radial is proposed to run. It's obvious that Nuernberger's concern is not out of line. Traffic access to and from the northeast and railroad track consolidation are pieces of the same puzzle.

Nuernberger observes that five separate railroad lines span the area in question. The lack of a decision on the radial logically makes negotiations on consolidation of the tracks more difficult and it precludes actual construction of overpass or underpass structures within the area. And because of the uncertainty over the radial, Nuernberger said, "we've probably kissed (federal) money goodbye."

This situation — where plans for improvements are interdependent and people and property are subject to the indecisiveness of authority — is an agonizing one for Lincoln. The thing is that there are not easy decisions to make which would clear up all the problems at hand.

The City Council is not disposed to make an immediate decision in favor of constructing the Northeast Radial according to existing plans. Such a decision undoubtedly would un-complicate things for people living in the radial's path and would make things easier for the Railroad Transportation Safety District, but it would be a decision fraught with political liabilities, leaving the council open to charges of making a colossal, expensive blunder.

On the other hand, if the council moves to kill the radial as presently designed once and for all, as it could do after a public hearing on such a resolution April 29, it could turn out to be a premature decision which could wreck plans made on that basis if the council later reversed itself.

Should the council decide to kill the radial and if it still sees the need for improving traffic access to and from the northeast, alternatives will have to be considered and a plan adopted and that process would still interfere with other plans.

Another factor is the council's possible inclination to await a transportation study update which is an element of the re-evaluation of the city's Comprehensive Plan. When the transportation element will be completed is anybody's guess. If the council takes that option, which under normal circumstances would seem to be the best thing to do, an indefinite delay in the study's completion would make an agonizing situation intolerable.

It is a certainty that the city at some time in the future will have to take steps to provide some sort of improved access to and from the northeast area of town. The need for it has long since been determined. City officials have been spinning their wheels in planning and making decisions on this northeast problem for many years. A valuable lesson should be learned from the situation in which Lincoln now finds itself.

Mail Goes Through, Slowly

WASHINGTON — Americans have been paying more for postage, yet the mails have been moving slower since the Postal Service went on a business basis three years ago.

The change was supposed to reduce waste, increase efficiency and improve the service. Instead, the opposite has happened.

To find out why, we have spent weeks investigating the Postal Service. The contracting system, we found, is plagued with problems. These have been caused by poor management and a cozy relationship with the contractors. The dream of speeding the mails by mechanization has floundered. Costs have soared out of sight.

The hard-headed businessmen who serve on the board of governors have failed to reform the cumbersome postal machinery. Most often, they simply rubber-stamp the recommendations of Postmaster General E. T. Klassen. And he has been caught up, inevitably, in the petty rivalries and ancient animosities of the Balkanized bureaucracy.

From the locked files of the Postal Service, we have obtained documents which tell the incredible contracting story. Since 1971, about half of the contracts have been awarded on a non-competitive basis. The ballooning of these contracts beyond their original prices have cost the taxpayers an extra estimated $100 million.

Eleven favored companies accounted for $60 million of the overrun, with each one adding $1 million or more to its contract. Another two dozen companies upped their fees by $100,000 or more.

Some of the additional costs were legitimate, with needed work being done for the extra money. But in many cases, the overrun merely paid for foolish mistakes.

Most of the contracting troubles have come from the attempt to mechanize the mails. Contracts have been let to develop advanced equipment, which would read, cull, sort and cancel the mail at a faster clip. Millions have been spent for the fancy machinery, but bumbling has outpaced the technology. Result: Today, the mails are slower than ever.

A memo, never intended to be read outside of the postal hierarchy, acknowledges: "There have indeed been problems with our procurement practices." It cites contracts which "were insufficiently justified, did not consider in-house capabilities, did not specify what use would be made of the end product, did not justify sole source . . . (and) did not consider alternatives."

An all too typical contracting fiasco was the order for a new facer-canceller, which would process envelopes. A $2 million contract was awarded to National Cash Register in 1968. The company developed three machines and was directed to produce 26 more at a cost of $4.8 million. Only nine of the machines are now operating, and they are still being tested.

The Postal Service also spent another $1 million to develop a new air culler, which could be used with the facer-canceller to speed letters through the post offices. Of the 14 that were ordered, seven are gathering dust in warehouses, six have been put to limited use and one is under scrutiny at the postal lab.

Post offices in urgent need of new facer-cancellers, meanwhile, were put off with promises of the new machines that are supposed to come from National Cash Register. Finally, the Postal Service had to buy 180 older machines from another company recently just to keep pace with current mails.

A similar tale of waste can be told about the new high-speed optical character reader, which is supposed to speed-read the addresses on envelopes and sort them out by code numbers. Philco-Ford started this project, with a $10 million postal contract, a decade ago. After an overrun of $3.1 million, for which Philco paid the penalty, the company finally came up with a machine that seems to work.

It has been triumphantly installed in Boston. But unfortunately, it runs only a few hours a day, since the post office isn't geared up to keep pace with the machine.

Without waiting for the Philco product, the Postal Service awarded other contracts for even speedier optical character readers. One was developed by International Business Machines, whose proud product now rapidly scans addresses in New York City. But it, too, can operate only a few hours a day without getting ahead of the mails.

One reason the mail can't keep up with the speed readers is that the mail sorters are too slow. To correct this, the postal authorities gave the Maxson Electronics Corporation a $7 million contract to produce 65 multiple position letter sorters. After working on it for a year, Maxson came back to the Postal Service with problems, which the company said would cost another $105,000 to straighten out.

The money was granted, but the problems weren't solved.

By IVAN TRAVNICEK
Lincoln, Neb.

A tiny speck representative of the technology of man is now more than 92 million miles from earth on a voyage to answer questions about one of the more mysterious bodies in the solar system — tiny sun-boiled Mercury.

As the 1,100-pound Mariner 10 space craft left the earth, scientists perhaps hoped that something truly inexplicable would be discovered to spur a greater space exploration effort.

But on the last few days of its voyage, it began to send increasingly clear pictures of this little-known member of the solar system. . . . And it became increasingly clear that Mercury was little more than a desolate body much resembling the earth's moon.

If Mercury failed to provide a startling stimulus toward greater space exploration, it did provide some answers to a planet so close to the sun that the sun's glare up to now has made it almost impossible to see clearly from telescopes on earth.

It is interesting to thumb through the Observer's Handbook of Astronomy published in 1967 and discover sentences that say: "Mercury merits little discussion."

The guide wraps up a cursory discussion with this:

"Unfortunately, our knowledge of the surface topography of Mercury is extremely slight, because the details are so difficult to observe."

An earlier guide published in the 1950s gives its rotation, or length of its day, as the same as its year, which is approximately 115 earth days. But in actuality its "day" is just over 58 earth days long, something now confirmed by Mariner 10.

This makes one wonder about the meager results earth-bound astronomers can get. Of the nine planets, only distant Pluto was less well known.

But know we know that Mercury has plains-like areas much like the "maria" on the moon and that it has similar craters, some of them 70 miles across.

Also seen in photos were dome-like ground swells, a crater with rocky material heaped up inside — possible evidence of erosion — and a rocky wall along the edge of a crater at least 100 miles long.

It was announced that the 2,900-mile diameter planet has a small magnetic field and a slight but appreciable atmosphere rich in the inert gases helium, neon and argon.

But what has the Mariner 10 venture, costing many millions of dollars, to do with largely earthbound man with mundane problems of energy shortages, pollution, over-population, poverty, hunger war and disease?

For one thing, you can say that here are many millions of dollars not going to solve those same problems of energy shortages, pollution, etc., (add to this list as many items as you want).

But woes of this nature have been with mankind ever since the first apple solved a certain hunger problem and have every indication of enduring until man no longer exists.

The few millions it took to speed Mariner on its way will hardly feed all the starving mouths of Africa, South America and Asia any more than those few millions will adequately solve any of the other problems.

The money is being spent exactly where it should be: in an effort to solve the mysteries of our extraterrestrial "world." For it is here, amongst the approximately 100 billion stars of the galaxy, that man's ultimate salvation lies.

Earth does not provide the space or resources to satisfy the driving spirit of man. One can only hope that salvation from amongst the planets or stars will come before man's voracious appetite for more of everything ultimately consumes his own race.

School Aid Bill

Sargent, Neb
Dumb! Dumb! Dumb! This is what we feel about the Nebraska State Legislature's overriding Governor Exon's veto of the State Aid to Education bill.

This has opened up a whole new can of worms and those legislators who voted to override will have to live with it. Three things have happened which will definitely influence the electorate when they go to the polls to cast their ballot this November.

First, the support of the local schools has been lifted from those best able to furnish such support (the large land-owners and businessmen) and placed squarely on the purse-strings of those who can least afford it (the low and middle-income taxpayer). Most of them work for a salary and with the devalued dollar and runaway inflation, it has been very difficult for them to maintain a decent standard of living. Now they are being forced to accept another burden and most are ill-equipped to do so. They will be heard from this fall.

Second, more state aid to schools can mean only more state control. Local control of the schools has been on the decline for many years through the acceptance of federal and state aid, for such aid always brings government control. If anyone still believes that the local school boards are running their schools, they are living in a dream world. Now they will lose more local control to the state.

Third, this action by the Legislature has assured the reelection of Jim Exon as governor of the State of Nebraska. He is now in the driver's seat and he won't pass up this opportunity. With all three of the legislators running for lieutenant governor voting to override, we will have to conclude Mr. Whelan's position is in good shape. If we happen to hear Mr. Exon snickering, we will know why.

The American Party has been accused of splitting the other two parties. Nothing could be further from the truth; the dummies are doing it to themselves. All we are doing is calling many things to the attention of the voters that they would just as soon the voters didn't know. They are finally learning that you can't trust politicians who do not operate under a moral code. We offer them an alternative: the return to constitutional government with law and justice for all, based on the premise that those who work ought to live better than those who won't, and that nothing is politically right which is morally wrong.

The limitation of government is the essence of freedom.

Endorsement

Following is a letter received regarding my campaign for the Lancaster County Weed Control Authority. Outside authorities are usually of little note in a local contest, but I think that the credentials of this particular endorser can scarcely be impugned!

"Ralph Waldo Emerson defined a weed as 'a plant whose virtues we have not yet discovered.' Today we seem to be forgetting the virtues of many plants that we once knew, and shoving these once treasured herbs back into that hatred category, 'weeds.' I believe someone who appreciates the richness of the plant life about us, and would like to preserve these treasures for posterity, should be on every board or committee that has part in deciding which plants shall be saved and which shall be eradicated.

"For this reason, I heartily endorse your decision to run for board member of the Lancaster County Weed Control Authority. It is on such grass-roots (pun unintended) level that this work must start. Signed: Euell Gibbons"

Two Veterans

Lincoln, Neb.
There has been much discussion lately concerning the plight of the Vietnam veteran. The inadequacy of the GI bill is all too apparent to the returning Viet Nam housing loans cover but a fraction of today's real estate costs. These men who were performing their conscientious duty deserve equal compensation and respect with that of their World War II peers.

The Vietnam war, however, produced another kind of veteran — young men who also performed their conscientious duty, against the war rather than in it. These are men who at 18 had the courage to say, "No, this war is wrong. I will not go," and then suffer the sometimes agonizing social consequences. How does a man find his rightful place in society after he has fought against the highest law in the land? For these veterans, there are no benefits nor low-term loans of any kind and often a prison record in place of family support.

The scars of the Vietnam war will be with us a long time. Let us pay all Viet veterans their dues, whether they be the serviceman's benefits or the resistor's unconditional amnesty and pardon. They both have paid a frightfully high price.

Cigarette Sale

Lincoln, Neb.
On Friday, March 29, I observed three youngsters purchasing cigarettes from the vending machine in the basement of Bryan Hospital. Since the link between cigarette smoking and cancer has been established beyond question, it has seemed a strange anomaly that a hospital should sell them. When that institution professes to practice the healing arts under Christian auspices and standards, the dispensing of cancer-producing substances becomes for me a tragic hypocrisy.

I understand full well that youngsters who want cigarettes will secure them from some source, but that fact does not warrant nor excuse the assistance of those who understand the consequences.

I call upon the management of Bryan Hospital to cease the sale of cigarettes or, if they cannot operate without that revenue, to do it under the kind of supervision that will protect the nine-to-12-year-olds from the debilitating, life-shortening weakness of their elders.

Fewer Pilots To Be Laid Off

New York (AP) — United Airlines announced a reduction in the number of pilots it plans to layoff this year.

The carrier said it would furlough 200 pilots instead of the previously announced 300.

Edward E. Carlson, president of United, said the airline "is encouraged by the upturn in business so far this year and the recent lifting of the Arab oil embargo."

Waverly Council OKs Omaha Bond Firm

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer
Waverly — The Waverly City Council Tuesday agreed to accept Kirchner, Moore and Co. of Omaha as its official bonding company for the next 18 months.
The move is considered important at this time because the City of Waverly is contemplating various improvements for which bonds may have to be issued.

The board will soon solicit bids on a new water tower and at the same time for reconstructing a used tower.

The council has previously discussed the purchase of a used water tower from Ralston. Ralston has stopped using its 500,000-gallon tank since the city's water supply was taken over by Omaha.

Waverly currently is supplied by a 45,000-gallon water tank and three wells.

Lloyd Bevans, city attorney and city clerk, said the town has inadequate water reserves for the fire department and poor water pressure for residents living at higher elevations.

Bevans said the city would prefer to purchase the used tank.

"but if the cost of a used tower gets too close to a new one, we'll go with a new one."

Another project in the works at Waverly is a new sewage treatment plant.

"I don't know where we stand on it," Mayor Wayne Marolf admitted.

He said the city had been promised $38,500 in federal funds for the first, or planning, stage, but that further action has been "postponed."

For the past four or five years, Waverly has also considered building a 60-bed nursing and care facility.

Marolf said a hearing on the nursing home proposal has been scheduled for 11:45 a.m.

Wednesday during a Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council meeting at the Lincoln Center.

The SENHPC will review the project proposal, paying special attention to: community need; aims and objectives; alternatives, and how the project is related to existing and planned health facilities or services in the area.

In other action, the Waverly councilmen were to discuss the proposed public swimming pool at Ash Hollow Park.

The contractor has requested a 6% increase in the total pool project cost. He has also asked for a 120-day extension in contract time "due to the inability to start construction" on the pool and subsequent cost increases for building materials.

The original pool contract was approved and awarded last October.

Feltner Nominated

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — A federal jury Tuesday night acquitted 10 undercover agents accused of terrorizing Illinois families in illegal narcotics raids last year.

The 10, including seven federal agents and three city policemen, were found innocent on all charges of violating the civil rights of 11 persons involved in the raids, conducted without warrants a year ago in the Collinsville, Ill., area.

Kenneth Bloemker, one of the federal agents on trial, said after the jury returned the verdict he believed the defendants "were indicted maliciously by the U.S. Justice Department."

He attributed the indictment to pressure placed on the department by Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., who conducted hearings in Chicago on the raids.

"He jumped on the bandwagon because he has some presidential aspirations," Bloemker said.

Defense attorney Norman London said that the "indictment should never have been returned." The other defense counsel, David Schippers, who formerly headed a special Justice Department organized crime strike force in Chicago, told newsmen Percy was guilty of violating a "fundamental precept of American justice."

"He decided before all the

Propane Finagling Is Found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Office said Tuesday it is prepared to turn over to the Justice Department evidence of marketing irregularities that helped drive up propane prices.

Charles R. Owens, a deputy assistant administrator, said the agency gathered the evidence in an intensive investigation of all levels of the propane marketing chain.

In testimony before a House panel conducting its own probe of propane price increases, Owens said FEO had uncovered instances of artificial transactions that added as much as 14 cents a gallon to the price paid for propane by consumers.

He described one transaction in which an oil company contracted to buy 15 million gallons of propane at 35 cents a gallon. The propane was bought from a supplier by a speculator at 26 cents per gallon. He then added his markup to the product and transferred title to the fuel to the person who held the contract with the oil company.

The second person then added his markup and delivered the oil to the buyer. "The circuitous route of this sale resulted in the two individuals realizing a profit of $1.375 million on their markup of nine cents a gallon," said Owens.

He disclosed these other findings:

—Instances of legitimate propane wholesale companies selling propane to companies wholly owned by one or more of the officers of the propane wholesaler. The second company adding an additional markup before reselling the fuel, giving corporate officers an additional profit on the transaction.

—Purchases, by wholesalers, of retail outlets, leaving the former owner as nominal head and routing sales through this retail outlet. The result: A double markup and profit.

—Large propane distributors estimating future cost increases and raising their prices in advance of the increase. This practice, said Owens, resulted in consumers being overcharged.

Owens did not name any of the companies involved.

He appeared before a House subcommittee chaired by Rep. William J. Randall, D-Mo., who has criticized the FEO for not holding down propane prices. His subcommittee has heard testimony that prices in some parts of the country have increased 300 per cent over the past year.

In other energy developments:

—The American Automobile Association reported that only nine per cent of gas stations checked were still limiting gasoline purchases last week compared with 14 per cent a week earlier.

—Republican congressional leaders, after meeting with President Nixon for nearly two hours, declared that congressional action on energy legislation is "the biggest scandal of all."

evidence was in," Schippers said. "It was a railroad job by the Justice Department. They were railroaded."

During the trial, some of the subjects of the raids testified that they were mistreated and terrorized by the agents.

John F. Conroy, head of the prosecution team in the three-week trial, said he did not think the Justice Department will prosecute five related charges still pending against agents.

The jury of seven men and five women deliberated about 3½ hours before acquitting the defendants on all 42 charges.

In closing arguments earlier in the day, Schippers told the jury that if the agents sometimes acted violently during the raids, it was because they were working in constant danger.

Government attorneys prosecuting the case argued that whatever noble cause the defendants were working for, they performed their duties in an illegal manner.

By The Associated Press

John Q. Public won't be faced with any major, immediate price hikes because of the ending of wage and price controls on 165 industries, say spokesmen for the companies involved.

Most businessmen contacted in an Associated Press survey said Tuesday that they already had set prices for current product lines or else were more concerned about competition than controls.

"We're in a pretty competitive business where price is controlled by the marketplace and we anticipate no real effect," said Herbert W. Sams, president of Scripto Inc., manufacturer of writing instruments.

The Cost of Living Council lifted controls on the 165 industries on Monday, 29 days before the scheduled expiration of the Economic Stabilization Act. Among the industries covered by the action were banks and other financial institutions, the apparel industry, hotels, motion pictures and other amusements and furniture.

The AP check showed no rush to higher prices. "We have had some price increases in mind," said a spokesman for First National City Bank, the nation's second largest commercial bank.

"They will now be phased in gradually," The spokesman added. "We weren't as sensitive (to controls) as other industries."

A spokesman for Republic National Bank in Texas said things like trust fees, automated customer service and check processing charges would be reviewed. "Undoubtedly we will have an adjustment in fees," he said, "but we have to stay competitive."

Earlier price increases in the affected industries were so-called "pass through" boosts, reflecting higher operating costs.

"We have been raising our prices as our expenses have gone up," said Stephen Sonnabend, senior vice president of Sonesta Hotels. "We check our food expenses to determine if it's necessary to increase our restaurant prices. As our electricity and fuel expenses go up, we have to make the increases as well."

"But we won't be reacting immediately to the lifting of the Cost of Living Council controls. We'll react to our increased costs."

A spokesman for the Connecticut Insurance Association said "no significant increase in rates is expected" as a result of the council action, noting that earlier guidelines allowed premiums to keep pace with inflation. He said the announcement Monday involved fire, homeowners, liability and workmen's compensation insurance, along with other categories of property-casualty insurance.

A spokesman for the Six Flags Over Texas amusement park said there had been a slight increase in the ticket price from last year, but added that the lifting of controls "will have no effect on us. Prices are set for this year and all our brochures and advertising material has been sent out."

ACTION LINE

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

For one of my classes I wrote a guide for teachers that uses quotes from and references to other sources. I want to copyright it. What is the procedure for material of this kind?

—R.C., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The city library has some material which explains copyright procedure. However, K. W. Remmenga, who works in the reference department, says this information is ten years old.

According to those guidelines, you are required to get permission before using previously copyrighted material. He suggests that you write to the Register of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20540. Ask for the current requirements.

On December 14, 1973, The Martin Luther Home in Beatrice sent an order totalling $43.37 to Allergy Free Products of Springfield, Mo. Now the order is in its fourth month and we still haven't received a mattress cover, box spring cover and pillow casing, which total more than $32.

Can you get us an explanation and our order?

—Eugene A. Bock, Beatrice

ACTION LINE: Mrs. Jane Gray of Allergy Free Products said the firm had trouble with several orders getting lost during December. The lost items included both letters to the firm and materials they shipped. She figures yours was one of them.

She will call you to find out exactly what you're missing, then she'll make sure it gets mailed to you. If the original package ever stumbles out of Postal Service limbo you can simply refuse it.

Mrs. Gray said her firm has a problem of its own, however. Allergy Free Products continually receives correspondence for the Acme Co. of Springfield, which makes steel products. Mrs. Gray said Allergy Free's mailing address is P.O. Box 345 while Acme's address is Rt. #345. Both are in Springfield, Mo. 65801.

For as long as I can remember I've enjoyed the white pillars which flank the entrance to the driveway at East Hills. Now, with the street being widened, what will become of the pillars?

—John Peterson, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: All things must pass and the pillars will have to come down. Dave Harrison, East Hills manager, said a new entrance is planned on Summer St. He said there is a possibility that the pillars will be replaced in the future.

What are the criteria used to decide when certain television programs are to be shown? It seems like they run the good programs on Sunday night when many people are in church.

—D.B., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: James A. Ebel, KOLN-TV general manager, said that the programs on Sunday night are mostly national network programs. Each network, he said, tries to build a competitive program schedule based on what the other networks are running.

Ebel said local scheduling is based on openings in the networks' schedules. Individual viewing preferences are different, but the networks try to appeal to the largest possible audience when scheduling, Ebel said.

We subscribed to the Consumer Gazette Jan. 23, 1974. We have our canceled check of $4.95, but no Gazette. I failed to write down the address, so I can't write them. Can you help?

—Mrs. Nora Mewes, Fairbury

ACTION LINE: The address: The Consumer Gazette, Division of United Consumer Service Corp., 466 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. The information assistant for the Gazette, Mary Pardley, said the magazine comes out every other month. She said you should be receiving your March issue within the week.

ACTION TIP: There is now a single contact point for any firm or individual interested in purchasing surplus personal property from the Department of Defense. Write to Dept. of Defense Surplus Sales, P.O. Box 1370, Battle Creek, Mich. 49016.

That office maintains a computerized list of bidders which is arranged to record each person's buying interests and geographical area. Sales catalogs will be mailed when the material becomes available in the specified geographic area.

28-1 Longshot Makes Teacher A Rich Woman

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — A longshot that raced across the finish made a retired Irwin, Pa. schoolteacher $115,000 richer.

"It's still such a dream," said Cordelia M. Campbell, one of 11 persons who held first place tickets in the Irish Sweepstakes. Quizar, a 28-1 longshot, was the winner.

The former first-grade teacher says she plans to travel to Wales, the home of her mother's family, and to help her two great-nephews with their college expenses.

Tin Holdings Dip

London (AP) — The International Tin Council said its buffer stock holdings of tin metal Dec. 31 was 1,001 metric tons, down from 4,740 a year earlier.

Chicago (AP) — The Fuller Brush Co., a division of the Chicago-based Consolidated Foods Corp., will move its headquarters from East Hartford, Conn., to Chicago this fall.

Parliamentarians Refused Visas To Visit Russia

LONDON (AP) — For unexplained reasons, four British lawmakers have been refused visas to the Soviet Union.

"We believe it quite unprecedented for a group of British members of Parliament to be refused entry," Patrick Cormack, one of the four officers of the All Parliamentary Committee for the Relief of Soviet Jewry, said.

"We simply wished to meet some Jewish families with whom we have been in regular telephone contact and to look round Moscow as tourists," the Conservative lawmaker added. The others denied visas were Conservative Hugh Dykes and Laborites Greville Janner and Peter Archer, who is also solicitor general.

Health Classes Set

"Maintaining Physical Health" will be the topic 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the first of four classes on "Successful Aging Within the Family" to be held at and sponsored by the Madonna Professional Care Center.

Students Will Be Honored

About 2,800 students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be honored for outstanding scholarship Tuesday.

The 46th annual NU Honors Convocation will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the coliseum, following a reception for the honor students and their parents hosted by Chancellor James H. Zumbege in the Nebraska Union.

Four students will receive C.S. Boucher Awards. The awards, named in honor of a former chancellor, will go to the senior man and senior woman having the highest grade average, the ROTC cadet and senior athletic letterman with the highest average.

In addition to honoring students, six members of the faculty will be cited for the excellence of their teaching. Each will be presented a medallion and a $1,000 check.

The students being honored will include 290 seniors who will be recognized for superior scholarship. These seniors have attained a standing in the upper three percent of their college class or have been on college honor lists since their matriculation as freshmen.

An additional 290 seniors, 567 juniors, 571 sophomores and 930 freshmen will be honored for high scholarship. These students have a cumulative grade average of 3.5 or higher (4.0 is an A) and/or rank in the upper 10% of their college class.

From professional colleges at the university, 38 dentistry, 59 pharmacy and 73 law students will be awarded a variety of honors during the convocation.

Chancellor Zumbege will present the scholastic honors to the students. Dr. Kenneth Bader, vice chancellor for student affairs, will be master of ceremonies. Dr. Virginia Y. Trotter, vice chancellor for academic affairs, will cite the outstanding teachers and Harry Haynie, president of the NU Foundation, will present their awards.

Prior to the convocation, Chancellor Zumbege will host the students to be honored and their parents at a reception in the Nebraska Union.

Two Place In Hearst Competition

Two students in the School of Journalism at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln placed high in a nation-wide investigative reporting competition sponsored by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

Rebecca Jo Ross placed sixth and Robert O. Ralston II placed 13th in the contest.

Miss Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Ross of Woodbridge, Va., reported on a study of Nebraska landlord and tenant relationships. She is a senior majoring in news-editorial journalism and graduate of Bellevue High School.

Robert O. Ralston II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Ralston of Fayette, Miss., reported on the development of bedroom communities around Lincoln. He is a senior and a graduate of Lincoln Southeast.

Miss Ross received a $200 scholarship, an equal amount going to the School of Journalism.

HEALTH TIP

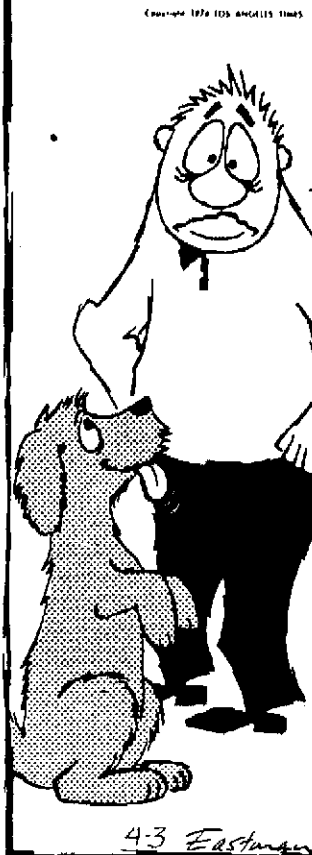

Congenital heart defects are those present at birth. The Nebraska Medical Association reports that congenital heart defect means the heart or a major blood vessel near the heart fails to mature normally during the period of growth prior to birth.

There is an error of development in which the arteries and veins in the heart-lung system are put together incorrectly. More than 30,000 children are born with heart defects in the United States each year. Mild in-born defects may never cause trouble, but serious ones may interfere with circulation of the blood, slow the child's growth and reduce his energy.

With the progress in heart surgery, the Nebraska Medical Association says that most patients with congenital heart defects can be restored to normal or near normal health.

Dr. Forrester will discuss "Engineering at the End of Economic Growth."

The convocation will be preceded by a press conference at 10:15 a.m.

Dr. Forrester is a distinguished alumnus of the University of Nebraska. He is one of the nation's leading engineers and was instrumental in the development and application of the modern digital computer.

In the late 1940's he helped develop the Whirlwind I computer at MIT and later he had major responsibility in the development of the Air Force's Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) system for air defense.

Automatic Bagging Developed

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Marvin Petal is bureau chief in London and Eugene Bacot is a correspondent in Brussels for McGraw-Hill World News.)
By MARVIN PETAL and EUGENE BACOT

London — As though the high cost of living were not problem enough, there's the added agony of thinking about it as you wait at the supermarket checkout counter. Slow-moving lines are made even slower by the cashier, or the bag boy or fumble-fingered customers stuffing groceries into bags and clogging up the conveyor belts.

But Britain's Imperial Chemical Industries (ICI) is rushing to the rescue. The company's plastics division has developed an automatic bagging system which relieves the pressure on the cashier, eliminates the packer and injects a little entertainment at the checkout bay. It will also tie in well with the coming laser-read computerized checkout systems.

Call the grab-bag, the system is still in the prototype stage. Earlier models have been field-tested in Belgium, France and Scotland. The London debut is being delayed while shopkeepers wrestle with an immediate problem of obtaining any kind of conventional packaging materials.

"Mind-Boggling"

Those Europeans who have seen the grab-bag in operation tend to describe it in their local equivalents of "mind-boggling." ICI hopes that by the end of this year it will be able to conduct trials in the United States, to try to grab a share of the U.S. market which is estimated at 20 billion bags a year.

Briefly, this is the way it works: the cashier lays on the counter what looks like a flat piece of plastic resembling a pillow case. In fact, the polyethylene sheet has already been folded, tucked, slit and reinforced. The cashier presses a button: four steel fingers jut out and grip the top part of the sheet in — well, a steel grip. The fingers at the same time tug the plastic back and the almost invisible midline slit becomes a large opening. The part of the counter on which the sheet has been resting is converted into a miniature elevator and glides down to a depth of about seven inches. The bottom part of the sheet, which really is a flattened tube, sinks into the resultant shallow well. The cashier tucks the items into the recess with the same motion that she uses in making her tally. When all the groceries are in the plastic-lined recess, the cashier again presses a button. The steel fingers retract, two slits at the side of the bag become carrying handles, the elevator returns to conveyor belt level and the customer trundles off, rousingly amused and a little less resentful at having spent so much money.

The bags are currently made in four sizes ranging from 1,000 cubic inches to 2,000 cubic inches. The biggest bag can handle a weight of 44 pounds which is plenty — considering what customers can lug without risk of collapsing before the tough bag does.

Field Tests

A non-automated version has been field tested in several Scandinavian countries where the tradition is for customers to bag their own groceries.

During the Denmark tri-out, instructions were posted in the form of a series of cartoons. The older generation was somewhat baffled and incredulous and, consequently, a trifle inept. The kids, their faith in cartoons unshaken, caught on immediately.

For the supermarket owner in Europe the system is competitive with paper bags and will become more so as paper gets more expensive.

But how widespread the use of the bag becomes depends to an extent on supermarket traditions; some as in Belgium, invariably give wrapping materials and bags with purchases. In the United States where the paper bag is entrenched, ICI will have to demonstrate productivity savings to convince supermarket owners.

Oddly enough, Dick Oliver expects to get his stiffest resistance in his native England. One reason is that supermarkets are not in the habit of giving away free plastic bags. Rather the practice is to sell them and more often than not at a profit. Another reason is that the English are notoriously resistant to any kind of change.

"In this country," he says, "we have such a great tradition tradition."

Tax Panel Shifts Oil Gears Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, shifting gears again, decided Tuesday to retain a reduced petroleum depletion allowance for certain oils until Jan. 1, 1979.

The provision would provide a 15 per cent level for at least a third of U.S. petroleum production.

The allowance, which oilmen use to save some $2 billion to $3 billion a year in federal taxes, permits 22 per cent of gross income from oil and natural gas property to be deducted from taxable income up to a top of 50 per cent.

The committee voting to remove this 50 per cent limit, decided on Monday to cut the allowance to 15 per cent on Jan. 1, 1975; to 8 per cent a year later, and then to zero on Jan. 1, 1977. That was a reversal of its previous move toward just a partial phaseout of the allowance.

In a series of revisions Tuesday, the committee decided to retain the allowance at a 15 per cent level until Jan. 1, 1979 for:

— The first 3,000 barrels of oil daily per producer.

— The so-called "stripper well" producing up to 10 barrels of oil per day.

— The Alaska north slope's oil production.

The legislation also would impose a new windfall profits tax on the petroleum industry. But it would provide that oilmen could escape paying virtually all of this new levy — an estimated $13.3 billion over five years — if they put such windfall profits back into exploration and development activity.

According to figures provided by the committee's staff, the legislation as it applies to all states but Alaska could boost the Treasury's pickup of money from the oil industry by $200 million this year and $1.1 billion next year.

This would rise to $2.2 billion in 1976, $3.3 billion in 1977, $3.5 billion in 1978, $4.3 billion in 1979, $4.6 billion in 1980, and $4.8 billion in 1981, with all figures including an estimated growth factor for the petroleum industry.

The staff said the impact of the Alaska provision could cut the amounts for 1977 and 1978 by some $200 million a year, with the north slope production to be some 2 million barrels daily at its peak. Backers of the Alaska provision said it would help speed production from these fields.

The legislation would make several changes in the tax treatment of U.S. petroleum company income earned abroad, expected to raise an additional $470 million annually for four years and $490 million in years beyond.

The committee rejected an attempt to eliminate depletion allowances for all minerals by Jan. 1, 1976.

Souvanna Phouma

Laotians Agree On Coalition

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma and the Communist-led Pathet Lao agreed Tuesday to form a coalition government. It came 12 years after the last such regime in Laos collapsed in bitter fighting.

Pathet Lao secretary-general Phoumi Vongvichit announced the agreement following a 70-minute meeting with Souvanna Phouma. The two had been conferring almost daily since Phoumi arrived in Vientiane last Wednesday for the final negotiations on a coalition.

Phoumi said the Pathet Lao leader, Prince Souphanouvong, who is a half-brother of Souvanna Phouma, will arrive in Vientiane on Wednesday.

State's Social Security Debt Reduced To $107,000

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

State officials have successfully haggled a Social Security debt down to less than one-tenth of what the federal government originally claimed the state owed.

Stan Matzke, state director of administrative services, reported Tuesday federal Social Security officials have unofficially agreed Nebraska owes $55,100 in back Social Security contributions for approximately 2,300 justices of the peace, constables, registrars of vital statistics and members of the Board of Educational Lands and Funds.

The Social Security contributions, which were unpaid by the state and the individuals and date back to 1951, have also accumulated another $52,000 in interest the federal government says is due.

$107,000 Total
Thus, the unofficial total owed by the state is $107,000, Matzke said.

Until the final word is given on how much the state owes, Matzke has written a letter to Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, requesting $150,000 in general funds for fiscal 1975 to make that payment.

"To ensure adequate funding authority, I am requesting $150,000 be made available for this payment," Matzke wrote. "All unused funds will, of course, be lapse to the general fund immediately."

"This matter has been a problem for a number of years and with this appropriation we can bring it to a close."

Matzke said the debt should be cleared up this year so that 6% interest is not charged for another year.

Senator Reluctant Marvel Tuesday indicated reluctance at amending an appropriations bill, LB1054, before it is known exactly what is owed.

"The staff tells me there's no official word yet on how much is owed," he said. "They only have tentative figures."

The legislative staff indicated an amendment has been prepared to deal with the debt. However, Marvel said he has not seen it.

"I object to the governor coming in here during the last week of the legislative session with this amendment," he said.

"I assume he has known this would be needed for some time.

Turnabout Seen
"He (Gov. J. James Exon) tells us one minute to increase the budget, and then turns around and criticizes us when we increase the budget."

The $107,000 figure was arrived at by a team of auditors from State Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson's office and the state accounting office, after a maximum assessment of $1.5 million in contributions and another $1.5 million in interest were levied by the federal government.

The Social Security contributions due from both the state and the employees were never made due to a mix-up over who was included in Social Security coverage.

In the 1960s, the state took the issue to court and lost on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Nebraska-Missouri Border Suit Is To Be Dismissed Due To Cost

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth said Tuesday he will continue his plan to dismiss a court case concerning a century-old border dispute between Missouri and Nebraska.

Noting that the cost of proceeding with the case, which involves only nine parcels of land, would be at least another $400,000, Danforth said, "It remains my view that litigation of this case would not be in the best interest of the state."

His comments came in response to action by the senate Monday directing him to proceed with the case, which has been before the U.S. Supreme Court since 1967.

A spokesman for the attorney general said a stipulation, signed by Danforth and submitted to the Supreme Court in January, is currently under consideration by the high court.

The dispute revolves around the fact that the Missouri River, which was designated by Congress as the boundary between Missouri and Nebraska, has changed course several times over the last 100 years due to federal construction on the river and natural occurrences. The changes in the course of the river have caused some land which was once on the Missouri side to now be on the Nebraska side of the river.

The Missouri senate, along with the house, sought to have the case pursued in the courts because many members feared the affected Missouri landowners would lose their chance to regain their property.

However, under the stipulation ending the boundary dispute, which has also been signed by Nebraska Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer, resolution of the matter would not affect any litigation concerning the more than 3,500 affected acres of land.

Danforth cited a letter he sent to legislative leaders and Gov. Christopher S. Bond last December, advising them of his intention to have the matter dismissed. He noted that in the letter he asked for comments on the proposed stipulation and received none.

The attorney general also pointed to a letter he received from appropriations chairmen in both the house and senate, saying he would receive no more funds for the case following expenditure of the last appropriation of $133,000.

"We have just run out of money," said the spokesman for Danforth.

Schmit Urges Caution On Fertilizer Shortage

Rumors of fertilizer shortages should be carefully explored before farmers sign up for deliveries at exorbitant prices, Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood said Tuesday.

Few Applicants For Judgeship Cause Concern

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska Supreme Court Justice Hale McCown said Tuesday he is a "little concerned" about the few applicants there are for the 4th District judgeship vacancy.

Three Omaha attorneys have applied for the seat vacated last month by Douglas County District Court Judge Donald Brodkey, who was appointed to the State Supreme Court.

McCown, chairman of the nominating commission, said, "I don't know whether they (potential applicants) are holding up, or there's a lack of interest at the moment."

The deadline for applying for the $27,500 job is April 12, the day the commission conducts a public hearing on the candidates in Omaha.

Applicants thus far are John T. Grant, 53, John J. Hanley, 57, and Benjamin M. Wall, 44.

The commission will submit a list of nominees to Gov. J. J. Exon, who will make the appointment.

Rev. Abernathy Believes Others In On Killing

Manhattan, Kan. (UPI) — The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy said Tuesday he believes "people in higher places" were implicated in the assassination six years ago Thursday of Dr. Martin Luther King, whom he succeeded as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Abernathy told a group of black students at Kansas State University he does not believe James Earl Ray, who pleaded guilty in the slaying, acted alone. "Maybe he fired the shot, but I think others were involved. I think it would be most revealing if he could go to trial and tell his story. I think people in higher places would be implicated."

Proposal Pondered

Washington (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board said it is considering a proposal to permit bank holding companies to deal in and underwrite federal, state and municipal securities.

While shortages exist in some areas, it is believed there is enough available, Schmit said. In a prepared statement, the Bellwood lawmaker said one of the problems contributing to the fertilizer shortage was the movement into the eastern states of many tank cars of propane for heating purposes.

"When the propane reached its destination, milder weather had moved in and there was no longer the need for the product, nor was the storage capacity available to unload the cars," he said.

He added that the talk of shortages is "partially the shortage of transportation and we have been faced with this problem in the Midwest for years."

The overall production of fertilizer in the country is up 8% with shipments reportedly up 14% from July, 1973, to February, 1974, according to statistics released by the National Fertilizer Institute in Washington, Schmit said.

Isley's Defense Attorney Wants Change Of Venue

North Platte (AP) — The defense attorney for a North Platte man charged with perjury said Tuesday he will seek a change of venue for his client.

William Padley of Ogallala is defending Melvin Isley, 22, who was charged last week with giving false information to a coroner's jury. The jury is investigating the apparent beating death March 13 of Fred C. Roberts Jr. of North Platte.

Padley said radio and newspaper publicity about the case has made it impossible for Isley to get a fair trial in Lincoln County.

County Atty. Walter Mullikin has asked the county commissioners to name a special prosecutor for the case. Mullikin was acting as county coroner when

Traffic Deaths Below Average

State Motor Vehicle Department statistics released Tuesday showed the number of traffic deaths and fatal accidents were at their lowest point in three years for this time of the year.

So far, 58 persons have died this year in 51 traffic accidents, compared with 85 deaths in 70 accidents as of March 31 last year.

The 1972 records showed 82 persons had died in 68 accidents by this time that year.

Isley allegedly committed the perjury, Mullikin will be a witness for the state in the trial.

Deputy County Atty. Dean Johnson, who otherwise would try the case, is leaving his post for a new position in Lincoln next week.

FDIC Attaches Properties Of Former Banker

Kearney (AP) — An order of attachment was issued Monday against Bycroft and Bill Heinzman of Kearney. Heinzman is included as co-defendant because the petitioners allege that last January Bycroft turned over properties to Heinzman as trustee.

The bank has filed an $83,637 damage suit alleging fraud against Bycroft and Bill Heinzman of Kearney. Heinzman is included as co-defendant because the petitioners allege that last January Bycroft turned over properties to Heinzman as trustee.

Bycroft was chairman of the board and principal stockholder of the Elm Creek Bank until it was closed by the state in April 1973 because of irregularities. It was declared insolvent one month later.

Egg Art Is Year-Round Hobby

'Tis the season to start decorating Easter eggs. However, anyone with a little knowledge of the fundamentals of egg decorating can turn the hobby into a year-round activity.

If you have a little time, every chicken, duck, goose and turkey egg has unlimited possibilities as gifts, table decorations, jewel cases, memento boxes, miniature flower baskets and oil burning lamps, according to Bertha Galloway, who recently taught a class in egg decorating at the YWCA.

"The more you do them (decorate eggs), the more ideas you'll have," said Mrs. Galloway. "Pretty soon, everything you'll look at you'll say 'Oh! I can use that in one of my eggs.'"

All that is needed by way of equipment is a manicure scissor, scraps of material, lace or bead trim, old buttons, small figurines, cut-outs from napkins, stationary or greeting cards, an assortment of fingernail polish, glue, a little creativity and a healthy pair of lungs to blow the egg out of its shell.

"When you blow the egg from its shell, it will blow easier if the egg is room temperature," Mrs. Galloway said. "Put a small hole in the top of the egg and a larger one at the bottom."

"Stick a darning needle through one of the holes to break the yolk. Then shake the egg to break the yolk suspension and just blow the egg out of the larger hole."

For the novice, perhaps the easiest design would be to cut a simple oval in the shell and trim it with lace and beads.

"First draw the oval design on the shell," continued Mrs. Galloway, "then poke a hole in the center of the oval with the manicure scissor and gradually cut until you have increased the hole to the size of the outline.

"Be sure that you wipe out the inside of the egg to remove all moisture which can cause a bacteria that can ruin the egg," she cautioned.

The next step is to coat the outside of the egg shell with either clear or colored fingernail polish. Let it dry and apply another coat.

Now, you are ready to decorate the opening by glueing a series of alternating trims or a single trim.

"Just glue a short strip at a time," advised Mrs. Galloway, "so that the glue doesn't dry before you can get the trim on."

"Also put the seam of the trim at the bottom, so that it is not so noticeable."

The inside decoration again is left to the imagination and innovations of the individual.

If you plan to use a paper cut-out, Mrs. Galloway suggests that when tearing out the design, "tear toward you to get rough edges. Then slit the pictures edges to make a rounded picture which will fit the curved egg and glue it inside the shell."

"Also, it helps to put the cut-out in the palm of your hand and work with it until it will fit in the egg."

Appropriate bases for figurines inside the egg are styrofoam, cotton and bark. Bases for the eggs include a number of items — plastic curtain rings, old buttons, pieces of jewelry, bark, homemade plaster of Paris bases and more sophisticated ones which can be purchased at hobby shops.

Also, available at hobby shops are various finishes for the shell, trims and figurines, "but you can utilize things at-home to decorate your eggs," Mrs. Galloway said.

Sexual Stereotyping NOW At Odds With Lincoln Schools

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The National Organization for Women (NOW) Lincoln Chapter, has served notice on the Lincoln Public Schools.

In a letter dated March 3, Ruth Ernst, NOW education task force chairperson, said that the organization is "prepared to take legal action if progress to eliminate sexual stereotyping on a system-wide basis as outlined . . . is not evidenced by fall, 1974."

Contained in the letter were NOW's specific demands for elimination of sexual stereotyping and sexist practices in the schools.

At its last meeting, the board of education adopted a policy statement prepared by an ad hoc Committee on Sexual Role Stereotyping, chaired by Dr. Ronald Brandt, associate school superintendent.

The approved policies dealt with the availability of classes — industrial arts and home economics, in particular — to students on a non-sexual basis and procedures for selecting instructional materials, mandating teachers to reexamine the roles of females as they are portrayed in school books and other class materials.

The action "was not a result of that letter, however," explained School Superintendent John Prash.

"Adopting a policy is only the first step," Prash added. "The school district now has the problem of implementing the policy."

"I think the letter was written because the policy . . . presented to the board was not as strong as (NOW) would have liked it to be."

Ms. Ernst, one of the NOW representatives on the committee, said, "I slowly realized that, without being pushed, they would take such small steps and slow progress, we would be there another 25 years."

"They should move fast," she said.

NOW was disappointed by the narrow scope of the policy statement and lack of provisions for implementation of the proposals, Ms. Ernst said.

The organization proposes that mandatory in-service meetings be established to introduce non-sexist materials and criteria for their selection proposed in the policy statement.

"It won't happen in one fell swoop," Brandt observed.

"We intend to have in-service meetings," he added, "No dates had been established, however."

"We expect to bring these things to people over a period of time," perhaps at "the building level with principals and staff."

Brandt said it was his understanding that the letter implied that "if there are actions they (NOW) consider discriminatory . . . they would take legal action, not because we didn't do the right kind of in-service. That would be inappropriate and I think they would agree."

Other demands listed in the letter include informing school personnel, students and parents of federal laws prohibiting sex discrimination in the schools; hiring central personnel to oversee compliance with those laws; purchasing and distributing teacher's supplements to discriminatory textbooks or replacing books; requiring school administrators to record attempts at elimination of sexist practices in the individual schools; and taking necessary action to bring about equity in athletic programs.

"It would be with regret that we would file suit," Ms. Ernst said. "But that doesn't mean we wouldn't."

"I don't feel we are threatened with court action," Prash said. "We are not responding to that threat."

The school superintendent said the committee on sexual role stereotyping was formed for the specific purpose of establishing a policy statement on sexual stereotyping. He said its mission had been completed and the ad hoc committee would be dissolved.

"We have no other plans," he said.

Calling itself "an advocate for students who are not receiving equal education because of sex discrimination," NOW has taken an active part in attempts at elimination of sexism in the public schools.

The organization last year conducted a study of sex role stereotyping in primary grade textbooks and also was active in the board of education's decision to establish interscholastic girls' basketball programs in the high schools.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story is the fourth in a series of profiles of Nebraska's 10 living First Ladies. The stories are written by students at the University of Nebraska's School of Journalism.

By CHRISTIE CATER

Mrs. Frank B. Morrison had been living in the governor's mansion about a week when she was mistaken for a member of the staff.

The 58-year-old wife of former Gov. Frank Morrison recalled that she had walked downtown that day and taken a taxi back to the mansion.

"I realized I had forgotten my key, so I had the cab driver take me to the back door," she said. "He asked me if I worked at the mansion and I was so flustered from forgetting my key that I didn't tell him who I was."

She said the driver asked her how she liked the mansion and she told him she loved it.

Several weeks later she attended a formal tea and called a taxi to take her.

"I came out the front door with my white gloves and fur stole on and saw that I had the cab driver who thought I was a staff member."

Mrs. Morrison said he looked "a little confused," but said only, "Are you still liking the mansion?"

Mrs. Morrison, First Lady from 1961 to 1967, called the governor's mansion "Easy to feel at home in."

"Just a few weeks after we had moved in my son told me he thought it felt like we had always lived there," she said.

Mrs. Morrison said Mrs. Lyndon Johnson's overnight stay in the mansion was probably the most exciting thing that happened while she was first lady of Nebraska.

Mrs. Johnson came for the first annual Nebraska Days celebration in 1965.

Secret Servicemen came to Lincoln six weeks before Mrs. Johnson was to arrive, Mrs. Morrison said.

"They turned mattresses and looked in pantries and window wells. Security was very tight then because of President John F. Kennedy's assassination."

Mrs. Johnson, who had never stayed overnight in any governor's home, hadn't been expected to stay at the mansion, Mrs. Morrison said, but Secret Service men asked her in the afternoon if she could keep the President's wife for the night.

"I had sent the cook on vacation so I cooked for her myself," the former governor's wife said. "She was one of the most gracious guests I have ever had."

Mrs. Morrison compiled the Nebraska Centennial Cookbook the year before her husband left office. She said she wrote 400 letters asking for recipes.

She contacted the wife of every governor, U.S. Congressman and Nebraska legislator and the wife of every mayor in Nebraska and every ambassador in Washington.

"We tried many of the recipes in the mansion's kitchen before we had them printed up."

About 50,000 cookbooks were published and sold, she said.

Mrs. Morrison, who was first lady during the beginning of student activism of the 1960s, said she remembers a time when 600 students called on her husband in his office.

"He invited them to the mansion that night and we all went to the basement and talked till midnight."

Mrs. Morrison headed the first "Sell Nebraska" tour to Europe during her years as first lady. Thirty Nebraskans went on the tour, which was originated to promote Nebraska in Europe.

"We thought too many Europeans knew only California and New York," Mrs. Morrison said. "We wanted them to learn about Nebraska."

A 72-year-old Omaha Indian, Chief Spotted Back, accompanied the group as a special guest. She called him "an instant success" in every European city they visited.

The Morrisons have three children: Jon, a lawyer in Whitefish, Mont., Frank Jr., a real estate agent in Omaha, and Jean, who is married to a doctor in Denver.

They each have two children of their own now, Mrs. Morrison said, "and my grandchildren are the light of my life."

Mrs. Morrison had trouble "unwinding" after her husband's three-term gubernatorial career ended.

"When you're the governor's wife, you're asked to many things because your husband is the governor, not because you're yourself," she said.

She found it hard to get used to not being "in demand" any more.

Today Mrs. Morrison is the national coordinator for the National Arbor Day Foundation, whose honorary chairman is Mrs. Richard Nixon. Mrs. Morrison contacts business representatives from national firms in the lumber industry.

She does television commercials in Omaha, where the Morrisons now live at 18006 Shirley St. and she has a weekly show, "The Grand Generation," on Nebraska Educational Television that deals with the interests and needs of "elderly Nebraska citizens."

Mrs. Morrison, a Democrat, said she thinks it's necessary for everyone to take an active interest in politics.

"I hope I never lose my interest," she said. "The more interest people have, the less problems there will be."

Opening lead — king of hearts.

There are many hands where it is important for declarer to keep one defender rather than the other out of the lead.

Here is a typical case. West starts out with the K-Q-J of hearts, South winning the third one with the ace.

Declarer's only chance for the contract lies in establishing his clubs, but there is a danger that if he leads the A-K and another club, West will win the third club and cash his hearts to put the hand down one.

To combat this possibility, declarer should adjust his play of the clubs so that he succeeds not only when East has three clubs and West two, but also in those few cases where West has three clubs and still can be stopped from taking the lead as the clubs are being developed.

He does this in the present case by entering dummy with a spade at trick four and returning a club. When East produces the nine, South goes up with the ace, returns to dummy with a diamond, and leads another club.

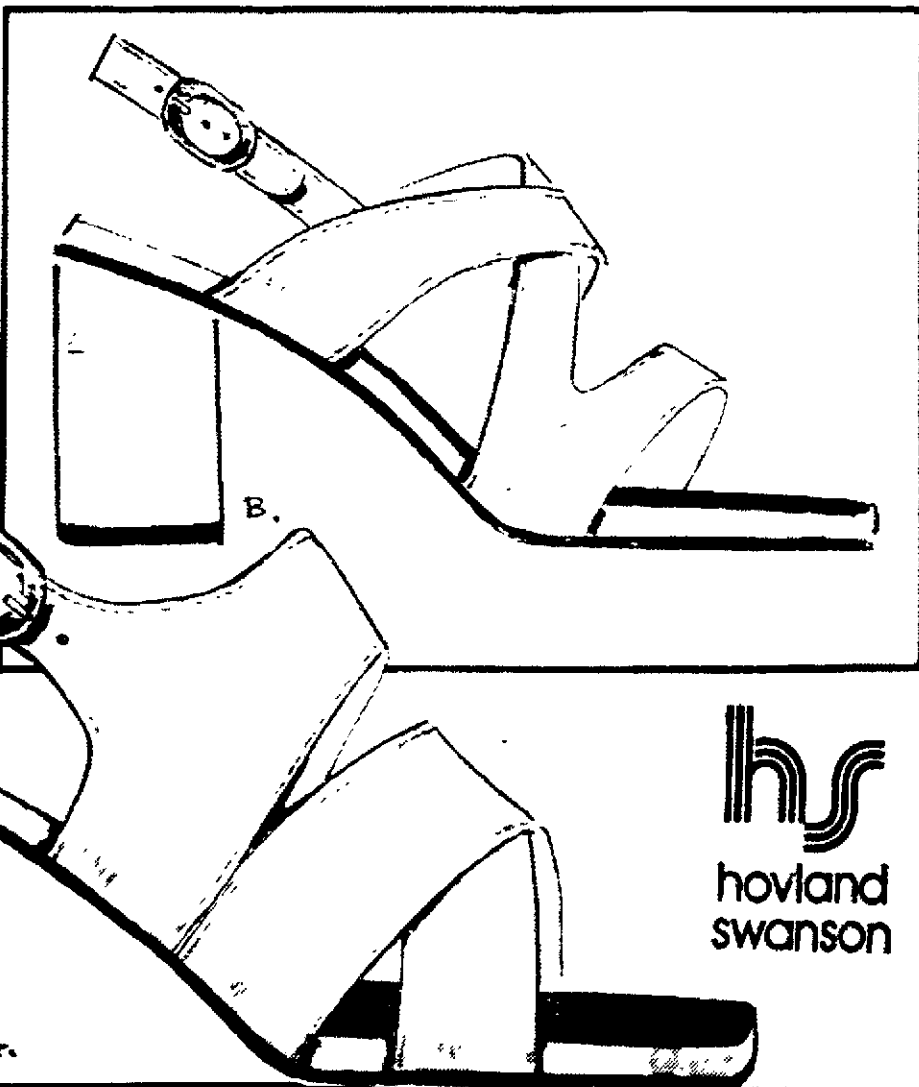

This time East produces the queen — and South of course ducks. When West follows suit, declarer is home. He has accomplished his objective and has nine tricks to show for his efforts.

East cannot foil declarer by playing the queen on the first club lead from dummy. South ducks the queen and acquires his nine tricks in a slightly different way.

Declarer hopes from the start that West has two clubs and East three, but at the same time allows for the possibility that if East has only two clubs, one of them is the queen.

There's Nothing Wrong

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Can you explain why a wealthy woman, when eating out, always takes home the leftover dinner rolls, carrot sticks, crackers, and anything else that's served and isn't eaten?

This lady is very generous where charity is concerned.

We are four women who meet once a week for bridge and lunch, and her conduct puzzles me.

I can understand a "doggie bag" for leftover portions of meat, but what about taking home every morsel of edible food on the table?

On occasion we all meet with our husbands, and when this woman asked my husband for his leftover carrot sticks to take home, he thought she was kidding. Yet her husband seemed indifferent. How do you figure this?

AMAZED

DEAR AMAZED: The lady can't bear to see anything wasted. (There are many people who, if they had the courage, would collect all the leftovers.) There is nothing wrong with it. If she were poor, she'd be "charity." But since she's rich, she's "eccentric."

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.W.G.: Better start looking around for another job. From too much Yes Sir, No Sir, a man can get an Ulcer.

Food Sales Tax Exemption Nixed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday turned aside a proposal to exempt food purchases, except at eating establishments, from the state sales tax.

The suggestion, authored by Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, was rejected on an 18-27 vote.

Chambers offered the plan as an amendment to a pending bill which is deemed unnecessary in view of almost certain legislative enactment of LB834, a measure which would increase payments for aid to dependent children.

The other bill, LB977, is Gov. J. James Exon's alternative plan for ADC increases. But Exon, through Sen. Thomas Kennedy of Newman Grove, has assured senators that he will sign LB834.

In view of that, Chambers wanted to gut the governor's bill and use it as a vehicle for his sales tax exemption plan.

Since food is "an absolute essential" and because the sales tax on food purchases "hurts those most who are least able to pay," he said, purchases should be exempted.

The massive school aid bill earlier enacted by the Legislature will increase the sales tax rate a full percent in 1975, Chambers noted, making an exemption even more important to families with a limited income.

Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff endorsed the Chambers plan as "an admirable thing," and recalled that Exon himself has supported such an idea in the past.

But a number of other senators suggested an increase in the food sales tax credit would be a better route to follow.

Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings said he has prepared amendments to LB832, which would boost the tax credit from $10 to $13 per person, lifting the credit to $15 the following year.

The Chambers plan would "penalize the old people who eat in cafes," Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln said, since it does not exempt restaurant purchases of food.

"Everyone should have the honor of paying some kind of tax," Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa suggested.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh said he opposes any further "narrowing of the tax base."

Sen. George Syas of Omaha cautioned his colleagues that they may acting "a bit irresponsible on taxation," enacting a school aid plan which will increase rates, adding to budget bills with floor amendments and sending more revenue back to local governments to make up for increased homestead tax exemptions.

And yet, he noted, the Legislature refused to raise this year's personal income tax rate from 11% to 13% to bring in additional revenue.

Prior to rejecting the food tax exemption proposal, senators buried, on a 4-19 count, Sen. David Stahmer's plan to provide ADC recipients with a $4 monthly supplement for a four-month period in order to buy fresh meat.

That would help both the ADC families and the farmers, he said.

Here is the vote on the Chambers amendment:

For: Carpenter, E. Carstens, Cavanaugh, Chambers, Duls, Fellman, Fowler, Goodrich, Kelly, Keyes, F. Closing Schedule Is OK'd

By United Press International
Nebraska lawmakers Tuesday approved a schedule covering the last five days of the 1974 session.

It calls for them to meet Wednesday and then to adjourn until April 8. They would meet again April 10-11 and then break until April 18 which would be the day of sine die adjournment.

Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff won 26-19 approval for the schedule, but Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha noted that the lawmakers could change it at any time with 25 votes.

Carpenter said he was attempting to provide as much time as possible for the Legislature to consider bills still awaiting first debate.

Emory Burnett, who is in charge of preparing bills and incorporating amendments into them, addressed the Unicameral and stressed that the 57th legislative day will be the "critical day." He recommended that the senators meet Wednesday and get every bill to him that they think might be vetoed.

Quite a few of the lawmakers wanted to keep working without interruptions. For the past several months, Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice said, "I've been kind of a spectator at a political sideshow for the past several months." He urged the Legislature to "go right on through... I'm tired of financing the political aspirations of others."

Sen. George Syas agreed and added that "we should get out of here for the people's sake."

Senators Can Hire Secretaries

By The Associated Press
Each state senator in Nebraska's legislature will be authorized to employ a secretary for service either in his hometown or in Lincoln between legislative sessions, under action taken Tuesday by the Legislative Council executive board.

As much as $500 per month may be paid these secretaries, although the pay level drew some protest as being too low.

Sen. Orval Keyes of Springfield appeared before the board to say he has lost three secretaries to higher paying jobs in government. He suggested the $500 limit be raised and the board agreed to consider his suggestions at another meeting Wednesday.

Payment on an hourly basis for parttime work would be allowed, but no expenses other than salary would be allowed the secretaries.

The board also approved keeping statehouse offices of the senators open between legislative sessions, with telephones in place, for use by the lawmakers as needed.

Purchase of four tape recorders at $2,500 each for legislative committee use was authorized. Two such recorders already have been purchased, according to Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, board chairman.

Also authorized was a $10,000 feasibility study of the possibility of computerizing state law and Supreme Court decisions for fast retrieval.

A proposal to upgrade salaries of key members of the legislative fiscal analyst staff by about 25% was delivered to the board, but action was deferred.

Winn Sanderson of the fiscal staff, currently paid $17,200, has been offered a position at the University of Nebraska at Omaha at $25,000 a year, the board was told. A salary of $21,500 was recommended for Sanderson.

Other salaries proposed were $18,500 for Bill Brunson, $17,500 for John Rochford, and $22,500 for fiscal analyst Eldin Ehrlich.

Chambers Seeks Split Candidacies

By The Associated Press
Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha has offered a legislative amendment that he says would make candidates for governor and lieutenant governor run individually, rather than as a team.

The Chambers amendment is to a legislative bill, LB933. The requirement that the governor and lieutenant governor run as a team is in the Constitution.

The legislature decided to take the amendment up Wednesday. Chambers said that he can break up the team without changing the Constitution because statutes are needed to implement the language of the Constitution.

Chambers is an announced petition candidate for governor. There are no provisions in the Constitution for petition candidates to pick running mates and Chambers does not want to pick one.

Sen. Richard Fellman of Omaha disagreed with Chambers' analysis and said the constitutional language was binding.

Chambers said he had started gathering petition signatures for his filing. He said that he and Republican candidate Richard Marvel were placing Gov. J. James Exon "between the devil and the deep black sea."

Chambers is the only black member of the Legislature.

Eaves, Ravnan Benefit Recital Slated Sunday

Margaret Eaves and Audun Ravnan will perform in a scholarship benefit recital 4 p.m. Sunday at the Unitarian Church in Lincoln. It is sponsored by the Lincoln Alumnae Chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon.

Miss Eaves, a soprano and Lincoln University of Nebraska-Lincoln music instructor, has just won the 1974 Artist Award of the National Association of Teachers of Singing. She was a regional winner in a Metropolitan Opera Auditions earlier this year.

Ravnan, a pianist and UNL professor of music, is scheduled to play at the Grieg Festival in Bergen, Norway this May.

Elephant Visits Florida Family

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "Roger, there's an elephant in our yard," said Jo Ann Pratt to her husband at 4 a.m. There was, too.

Myrtle, an Indian elephant, had escaped from a nearby circus and was eating grass and palm saplings in the Pratt's garden.

It was the third time Myrtle has visited the Pratt's this year, they said. As the elephant was led away by its trainers, Roger Pratt, 3, told his mother: "Mama, we're going to have to do something about these elephants."

Burbach Back On The Job

By United Press International
State Sen. Jules Burbach of Crofton, hospitalized last weekend after suffering chest pains, returned to his seat in the unicameral Tuesday.

In a statement released to reporters he said, "because I am a candidate for the office of lieutenant governor of Nebraska,
I feel it is my responsibility to report fully on the condition of my health."

He said last Thursday morning he experienced "sharp pains in my arm and chest" and upon the advice of a physician went to Bryan Hospital.

"Because of the location of the pain, I was placed in the coronary care unit where I was observed for the next two days," Burbach said. "Shortly after I was admitted to the hospital the symptoms abated, and I have had no further pain since that time."

The Crofton senator said before he was released Tuesday morning, his doctor signed the following statement and authorized its release:

"Senator Burbach was hospitalized for several days because of chest pains. He received many tests which reveal he did not suffer a heart attack. He is released to return to full time activity on discharge from the hospital."

Burbach said he was presenting the report on the condition of his health "in recognition of the public's right to know the qualifications of candidates for office — including physical qualifications."

Douglas Co. Corrections Bill Stalled

By United Press International
Sen. Otho Kime, a former western Nebraska sheriff, came within one vote of getting enough support Tuesday to kill a bill which would permit the Douglas County Board to set up a board of corrections.

Kime said LB782 is "a bad bill" opposed by the Nebraska
Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association.

The vote on the bill motion was 24-20, an attempt by Sen.
Richard Fellman of Omaha to advance the measure to final reading also failed — on a 19-21 ballot.

According to Fellman, "all current thinking" is that law enforcement must be separated from corrections. LB782 provides that the sheriff would have charge of prisoners "until sentenced." Kime noted, then asked: "What happens after sentencing and there's a riot in the jail? Who is responsible?"

Fellman answered there would be personnel in the jail to handle such a situation. He said
Douglas County Sheriff Ted Janing has expressed no formal opposition to the amended version of the bill. But Sen. John Savage of Omaha called Janing's office during the debate and was told he opposes the measure.

Fellman said the county board would have to appoint a professionally qualified person to head up the corrections department and that no present deputy sheriff or reserve sheriff jobs would be jeopardized.

Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, who said he would go along with Fellman because he has always shown sound judgment, wondered "why a senator from the Sandhills wants to get so involved" in a Douglas County matter.

Fellman cautioned that several million dollars in federal money for constructing a jail at Omaha might hinge on what the senators do with the bill.

"Ted Janing is afraid of losing one-half of his empire," he added. "I have tailored this bill to meet all of his objections . . .
killing the bill could set Douglas County corrections back 10 years."

The state Real Estate Commission has revoked the real estate broker's licenses of Paul E.
Bundy and Bundy Realty Inc., of Fremont.

In an order dated Monday, the commission cited three incidents as justification for the revocation. In one case Bundy failed to deposit rent in a trust fund, in another he failed to return a $5-000 deposit, and in the third he did not convey title to a house he sold or refund the $8,000 purchase price, according to the commission order.

La Paz — West outside on the patio at La Posada and watch the sun go down. The sun goes down behind us. Beyond the desert hills over the Pacific. But it leaves a blue and gold pattern on the Sea of Cortez.

There was just enough chill in the air to burn a mesquite fire. It's a scrubby desert brush — this is thorny country. Everything that grows is ready to stab you.

The cowboys in Baja California wear huge chaps, a quarter inch thick cowhide. The cattle are scrawny. They work hard for a living.

It's not an easy country. The Jesuit missionaries were hard put to get enough to live on. The few thin Indians had ways of recycling cactus fruit you wouldn't believe.

A pleasant evening as the sun goes down. Que lastima, I have to go. Away from the fishing boats rocking on the sunstruck blue water. Away from the brown desert, the tall cactus and the eagles wheeling overhead.

Away from the diving brown pelicans and the sailing frigate birds. The porpoises leaping in great gunmetal curves. The shrimp boats where we buy a fresh kilo for a few dollars, boil them on the boat and peel them to go with cold beer.

I said to Bill Callahan who runs La Posada: "I don't think I'll go. I think I'll stay here and open a taco stand."

It's a pretty evening in La Paz.

The new 1,000-mile highway opens the primitive country. (You could do worse than opening a taco stand. Maybe a chain. Maybe a McDonald's — we'll ruin the country yet.) There weren't many Mexican handicrafts in Baja. Where they had them — baskets, saddle making — the government has built little market stalls on the highway.

There are several tourist stores in La Paz. They sell things brought from the mainland. Taxco silver. Saltillo serapes. Straw hats from Morelia. The prices are higher than what they charge the tourists in the Pink Zone in Mexico City. (Copyright Chronicle Publishing Co. 1974)

NU Medical Center Said 'Exploited' On Abortions

Omaha (UPI) — A University of Nebraska regent testified Tuesday he favored limited abortions at the Medical Center a year ago because the center was being "exploited" through the increased number of abortions performed there at the time.

Dr. Robert Koefoot, a Grand Island surgeon and regent chairman in June 1973, exchanged minor displays of temper with Omaha attorney Lawrence Batt, spiced by periodic admonitions from presiding Federal Judge Richard Robinson.

Batt is seeking in behalf of two Medical Center physicians to prevent the regents from threatening his clients' employment.

Rights Said Denied
Koefoot, who said he has performed two abortions in 25 years, testified he was dissatisfied with the two professors "because the terms of their employment was not being followed as specified by the Board of Regents."

He added he was "unable to find out any rhyme or reason for such a bill" from top Medical School officials.

"I think this was more or less my reason for believing the Medical Center was being exploited" through abortions performed in the Obstetrics and Gynecology Department, Koefoot said.

He said a regents meeting on June 8, which limited the number of abortions to those needed to preserve the life of the mother and maintain a "conservative" medical teaching program, was an attempt to "try to solve the multiplicity of abortions at the Medical Center" so that other procedures would not be excluded.

He said he received "a number" of complaints to that effect from "other faculty members, nurses and allied personnel," and said he disagreed with Drs. Robert Kugel, Medical School dean, and Robert Messer, chairman of the Obstetrics and Gynecology Department, that the plaintiffs could effectively perform their duties while operating an outside abortion clinic.

"In one statement Dr. Messer would say how busy they were, and in the next, that they should be granted permanent three-quarter time status," said Koefoot. "It didn't make sense."

"On The Hook"
In testimony earlier Tuesday, Messer said both he and Koefoot were "on the hook" from outside pressure concerning the abortions, adding that both he (Messer) and his family have been subjected to "intolerable harassment" from a segment of the public opposed to abortion.

After the pro-abortion ruling in the U.S. Supreme Court in January 1973, he said abortions had risen to more than 30 per week.

Regents attorney Flavel Wright in cross examination outlined general contract provisions contained in the university's medical service plan stipulating that professors must "geographically" confine their activities to the Medical Center unless otherwise specified.

Wright asked whether the off-campus clinic was "officially" affiliated with the university.

"No, but I claim it should be," Messer answered, adding that out-patient facilities are more efficient and are becoming a national trend.

In response to Wright's questioning, Messer told the court he was an incorporator of the abortion clinic, received no funds from it at present, but would be a shareholder when stock is issued.

He testified he approved of the Orr and Dietrich request for permanent part-time status to operate their clinic so they would not violate the regents' resolution.

Nebraska 15 Closed For Repaving
The Department of Roads has closed Nebraska 15 from the Seward-Butler County line to Nebraska 92 for repaving.

Cleanup Staged At Lake McConaughy
Ogallala (UPI) — The area around Lake McConaughy near here is a lot cleaner these days. Recently some 800 volunteers spent several hours picking up bottles, cans and other debris in the camping areas, the park and picnic areas, and along the 50-60 mile shoreline. They found 10 pickup truckloads of trash in the Martins Bay area alone.

Theater Group Elects Lincolnite
North Platte (AP) — The Nebraska Association of Community Theaters elected officers at its annual meeting here. Jean Saunders of Lincoln was elected president. John Arnold of Aurora was chosen vice president. Other officers chosen include Carrol Thoma of Aurora, secretary, Winston Webb of Grand Island, treasurer, and Molly Lang of Carleton, editor.

Norfolk Firm Gets Salt Creek Work
Omaha — Theisen Bros., Inc., of Norfolk has been awarded a contract for construction of emergency bank protection on Salt Creek in Lincoln. The award of the $17,081 contract was made by the Corps of Engineers in Omaha. The work covers three different construction sites along the existing flood protection project. Slope protection will be placed along 300 feet of Salt Creek in the vicinity of Van Dorn Street, and along 600 feet below 27th Street.

Trouble Shooting Contest Slated
Hastings — The annual Plymouth trouble shooting contest will bring together auto mechanics students of this area April 25 at Central Nebraska Technical Community College here. The students will compete in one of 100 regional contests being held in all 50 states. The Hastings meet will draw entrants from 11 Nebraska high schools and eight post secondary schools.

4 Basic Defects Seen In Economy

... By Nader Associate

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

"People simply do not get what they work for in the economic system," a lawyer connected with Ralph Nader's Washington, D.C., office said in Lincoln Tuesday.

Beverly C. Moore Jr., of the Corporate Accountability Research Group, submitted that "from my point of view, there are four basic defects in the way the economy operates."

Moore and Dr. Henry Manne, law and political science professor at the University of Rochester, N.Y., talked with Lincoln reporters before a conference, "The Consumer and the Economy 1974," at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Moore's first objection to the operation of the economy concerned monopoly profits, which he said are "50% higher than competitively structured industries" and result in 1% of the U.S. population getting 33% of the profit wealth.

Moore's remedy: Break up the monopolies.

"No Incentive" Second, "The market does not generate the types of information the consumer desires" in getting the most out of products he buys, Moore said. "There is no incentive for advertisers to tell about the negative aspects of products."

He maintained it would not be unreasonable to assume consumers could get 20-30% more purchasing power from a dollar, based on more informed decisions.

Third, Moore said the market produces detrimental side effects, ranging from pollution to overcrowding and diet deficiencies, and that there is "no profit incentive for the perpetrators to reduce these effects."

Finally, he proposed "market supportive regulations" in place of governmental protectionism, replacing the Washington bureaucracy with a "business service bureaucracy."

Manne replied that "the solution cause that I can find is always in government," and submitted that sustained monopolies have never been privately protected. Rather, "businessmen have subverted the angles in government."

Of problems with the economy, Manne said, "every single cause that I can find is always in government," and submitted that sustained monopolies have never been privately protected. Rather, "businessmen have subverted the angles in government."

There should be a desperate attempt, he said, to "get rid of the power of government to interfere" in the economy. "If you give responsibility for these things into the political arena," Manne said, they won't work.

Congressmen are saying they want to remove government from the market, Manne said, but propose to do so "by more government activity." He suggested that once the government is into regulating the economy, it will never get out.

Manne sparred with Moore on the latter's proposal for more accurate consumer information. If people wanted more comparative product information, "it would be marketed in myriad ways," Manne said.

"Can Get It" "The consumer doesn't want that," Manne said, because of an unwillingness to pay for it. Besides, he added, "where it's necessary for individuals, as judged by them, they can get it."

Moore objected, saying consumers want more information, but at no additional cost. Objective information about products "could be provided in the same advertising space it takes to say, 'Mmm, good!'" he said.

Moore added that specialized trade journals serve only a "very narrow" area of consumer purchases, and that mass advertising "distorts" consumer preferences.

Federal Funds Available For Waste Control Dams

There is gold waiting to be picked up by some Nebraska farmer-feeders, according to William Steinkruger of the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) office.

He was speaking of $3.7 million in funds for the 1973 Rural Environmental Assistance Program (REAP) which had been impounded by the federal administration and recently freed by court order.

The funds are available to farmer-feeders to help with the cost of building feedlot waste control structures, Steinkruger told a meeting of the state Livestock Waste Advisory Committee at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Plans Approved Nebraska was fortunate in having state and county REAP plans already approved, on the shelf and quickly dusted off, he said.

This may be the last opportunity for the farmer-feeder to get help in paying for the waste control structures that are required by law to be built by Dec. 31 this year, he said.

The cost sharing is available

Feeling Always Key For Auburn Painter

Auburn (AP) — Paul Fell paints feeling, whether it's his favorite subject — football — or a cartoon for an area newspaper.

Fell, 28, is the art instructor at Auburn High School, where he helps coach football and junior high wrestling. He also teaches a night class at Peru State College, which he attended.

In between, he manages to whip up weekly cartoons for Mavrick Media in Syracuse.

"The discipline is good for an artist," Fell said, referring to his weekly deadlines. Most of the cartoons come out of his basement studio on Sunday nights. He's surrounded there by paintings in various stages of completion.

Fell has been interested in football since his high school playing days in Worcester, Mass. His father was a referee 25 years, and this added to his feeling for the game.

Fell received his master's degree in education from Kearney State College in August. His master's thesis was entitled: "Personal Reaction to the Game of Football as a Continuing Series of Experiences."

Dr. Seymour M. Lipset said a stable democracy depends on people "voting for their party."

Lipset, who teaches government and sociology, said independents now constitute an estimated 40 per cent of the U.S. voting public and the same thing is happening in other countries.

There is a "real danger" that the drift could bring on the collapse of the two-party system in the United States in November, he said.

"It's likely the Democrats will have the biggest majority in modern history," he said.

Lipset commented during an interview before addressing the University of Nebraska at Omaha symposium on "Power, Politics and the Crisis of Confidence in American Society."

He said the voter drift toward independence is the result of only to farmer-feeders, not to commercial feedlots, he said.

The sharing is limited to $2,500 maximum to any one individual, he added.

However, a farmer-feeder who wishes to cost-share on conservation practices such as terraces, dams, etc., can qualify for up to another $2,500 this year, Steinkruger said.

$2 Million Available This is under the new Rural Environmental Conservation Program (RECP), which has $2-128 million available in Nebraska, he said.

The REAP program could be a one-shot opportunity which will be gone if Nebraska farmer-feeders do not take advantage this year, he said.

Controls already completed or started are not eligible for the REAP cost sharing, he added.

Lanny Ikenogle, head of the Agricultural Pollution Control Division of the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control (DEC), pointed out that feedlot operators in Nebraska have only until Dec. 31, 1974, to comply with state control regulations.

Of 4,279 livestock operations of a size to come under control regulations, his inspectors have found 887 that require controls, he said.

Of these, 334 have completed waste control structures, he said.

E. A. Olson, NU Extension agricultural engineer, suggested that farmer-feeders, even though they may not be using their feedlots this year, should consider taking advantage of the REAP cost-share funds so they will be in compliance with the waste control regulations when they start using their lots again.

File Request Also, they should file with the DEC a request for a permit to discharge pollutants into waters of the state, he said.

The term "permit to discharge pollutants" is a misnomer, he said. Actually, the "permit" is a protection for the feedlot operator in that it covers him under the law if his control structures overflow as a result of a torrential storm which the structures could not be designed to contain, he said.

Norman Klocke of the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regional office in Kansas City, Mo., said his office has received only 75 to 80 requests from Nebraska for discharge permits.

Of these, five permits have been issued, 20 or 25 are on public notice, and about 40 have been notified that they are exempt from regulation because they constitute no danger to the waters of the state, he said.

One indictment has been returned against a feeder in Nebraska for allowing animal waste to be discharged from his property, he said.

The EPA will be looking for more violations and probably will return criminal indictments where they are found, he said.

While Nebraska feeders apparently are reluctant to apply for the permits, they should do so for their own protection, Klocke said.

Lundstrom To Quit G.I. School Post

Grand Island (AP) — Grand Island School Supt. Dr. Glenn Lundstrom will vacate his post by "mutual agreement" at the end of the school year.

The move was announced Monday night at a meeting of the school board by its attorney, John Higgins.

The board offered Lundstrom, 62, a secondary post in the school system. He did not indicate whether he would accept the offer.

The decision apparently resolves a long-standing split between Lundstrom and members of the board. In a recent letter to Lundstrom, the board mentioned his "unsatisfactory performance" as chief administrative officer.

Offered Lundstrom was the newly created post of assistant superintendent in charge of secondary curriculum coordination. The duties and salary of the office have not been worked out, Higgins said.

As superintendent, Lundstrom was paid more than $27,000 yearly.

NSEA Unit Sets Up New Dues Plan

Omaha (AP) — Contributions to the Nebraska State Education Association's political action group may double next year under a plan approved by the association's delegate assembly.

Called a "reverse dues check-off," the system allows the association to collect $2 a year per member along with the regular dues. Executive Secretary John Lynch said

The $2 goes to the political action group, he said. If a teacher doesn't want to participate in the action group, he must ask for the $2 back, Lynch said.

Currently there are 19,500 members in the state organization. A $2 donation from each member would bring in $39,000 a year. Now, about half the teachers make the donation voluntarily, he said.

Lynch said, "We hope to be

DEC Head J. Higgins Dies At 55

James L. Higgins, Nebraska's first director of environmental control, died of a brain hemorrhage Tuesday at the Lincoln Veterans Administration Hospital.

Higgins, 55, was admitted to the hospital last Thursday complaining of a headache. Dr. John Clothier, chief of staff at the VA Hospital, said it was determined that Higgins had suffered a milk brain hemorrhage.

Prior to Tuesday, Dr. Clothier said, Higgins was progressing and doing "reasonably well." He said Higgins was conscious, the bleeding had stopped and his spinal fluid was clear.

Approximately 4 a.m. Tuesday, he said, Higgins suffered a massive hemorrhage. Higgins was put on the critical list and placed in intensive care, where he died mid-afternoon Tuesday.

No Announcement There was no immediate announcement from Gov. J. James Exon concerning a successor.

Higgins, a native of Schuyler, is survived by his wife, Jackie, and four daughters and one son.

Exon appointed Higgins to the post in 1971, shortly after the Legislature elevated environmental control to department status. During the first years of the new agency, Higgins was responsible for drawing up rules and regulations for pollution abatement and working with industry and agriculture in efforts for clean air and water.

During his term in the agency's top post, he stressed what he called a reasonable, cooperative attitude towards cleaning up wastes.

Several Programs In that time, the state has embarked on a feedlot permit program to control waste runoff, statewide regulation of air pollution sources, financial aid for municipalities to help with construction of waste treatment plants and a solid waste program.

Higgins returned to his native Nebraska in 1967 after retiring as colonel in the U.S. Army with 26 years of service. At the time of his retirement, he was chief of staff at Ft. Carson, Colo.

His awards include the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star and the French Croix-de-Guerre. Between the time he returned to Nebraska and his appointment, he was the office manager of a natural gas line construction firm.

He earned a master's degree in public administration with a minor in environmental engineering from the University of Florida in 1970.

AFSCME Seeks Neutr

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) has asked Gov. J. James Exon to agree to call in an arbitrator to resolve disagreement over grievance procedures and salaries for more than 400 employees at the State Department of Labor.

According to union officials, the six-month-old negotiations between the Exon administration and AFSCME for the first labor contract with a state agency in Nebraska have reached an impasse.

Mary Combs, AFSCME director, said as of late Tuesday she had received no reply from Exon or his personal representative in the talks, attorney Norm Krivosha, regarding the request for a neutral, non-binding mediator.

Union members contacted expressed doubts regarding the administration's willingness to bargain in good faith.

Lack Of Attendance In a copy of the letter to Exon obtained by The Star, Mrs. Combs said, "One of the problems encountered by the union and representatives of the Labor Department employees, is that on dates which were pre-set for his convenience, Mr. Krivosha has not attended the negotiating meetings."

powered to make decisions do not show, we can hardly reach an agreement."

Krivosha declined to comment, and Exon was not available for questions. Mrs. Combs also stated: "It is imperative that both sides of this dispute make every effort to resolve these matters at the earliest possible time. The union stands ready and has exhibited its desire to do this. We have not detected this desire on the part of your representatives..."

"In order to help resolve this impasse, the union is formally proposing that the parties request the assistance of a mediator under the auspices of the federal mediation and conciliation service."

Hopes Fading When negotiations began last October, AFSCME officials had hoped an agreement could be reached in time for legislative approval. However, with less than a week left in the legislative session, those chances are slim.

Reportedly, the two negotiating teams have agreed on a preamble and 14 sections of a contract dealing with such matters as check-offs for union dues, seniority and holidays.

Mrs. Combs said the union is not satisfied with the proposed pay plan for fiscal 1975 which provides all state employees with a 5% raise plus $300. The union reportedly would like to

UNL Faculty Senate OKs Program Evaluation Plan

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate Tuesday approved a document which Chancellor James Zumberge said will give faculty "more input than you've ever had in the (university) budget process."

In a voice vote with few dissents, Faculty Senate members adopted the report of the Academic Planning Committee (APC), which includes procedures for evaluating university programs.

A report by the APC said, "No matter what the budget for any given year is, there seems to be little doubt that program evaluation as a basis for internal budget decisions will be a permanent part of the university."

The adopted report sets up a preliminary screening procedure and flexible guidelines for follow-up full evaluation of selected programs.

'Maximum Voice'

Mathematics Prof. Max D. Larsen, who headed up drafting the proposals, moved for their adoption, saying, "I believe this gives the faculty the maximum voice" in the evaluation process to strengthen or eliminate programs.

Larsen pointed out that university departments are "going to have to make a case" for improved quality of programs, requiring additional funding, in light of declining enrollments.

Compromise Health Measure Introduced By Kennedy, Mills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation for a sweeping universal health insurance plan paying the major part of most health bills and guaranteeing that illness could not cost a family more than $1,000 a year was introduced Tuesday by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark.

The joint sponsorship of the measure marked success of months of negotiations to reconcile what were originally sharply divergent approaches to health care legislation. It gave the compromise proposal a big boost toward ultimate enactment.

Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, announced hearings April 24-26 and Further, he said, the process may aid "programs which look good" in becoming candidates for areas of excellence next year, which are funded under a special legislative arrangement.

The screening procedures stipulate the chancellor, after consulting with the APC, "will determine which programs will participate in the full evaluation."

Statements on programs within departments and colleges identified for initial screening must be submitted to the Chancellors Council by Monday. The statements are first channeled through the academic deans to the APC.

The new evaluation procedures include descriptions of programs, including their goals and priorities, need, present cost, quality or potential quality, availability of resources, and satisfaction of the university's formally stated purposes and essential functions.

The procedures also comply with the legislative budget procedure providing that a peer review committee must come from outside the university, and establishes set-up of a local committee when an outside peer committee is unavailable.

Larsen said the procedures will provide the Legislature specific information about what programs do and don't do, and the UNL central administration will aid in preparation of the data compiled.

every Friday thereafter until official and private witnesses have been heard.

The benefit provisions of the bill are similar to those proposed by President Nixon. Participants would be covered for hospital stays without limitation as to days or costs; physicians' services in home or office and special services. In general, the patient would pay 25 per cent of the bill, but only up to $1,000 a year per family. Patients could choose their doctors.

The major costs would be covered by a special insurance plan under the Social Security Administration. Employers would pay 3 per cent and employees 1 per cent of each worker's salary up to $20,000

A number of Faculty Senate members objected to the lack of specific reference to research programs in the guidelines that ask if there is a need for the program described.

Amendment Nixed

The group defeated an amendment to the procedures that would have included research in that section, after discussion indicated it was endorsed elsewhere in the document as one of the university's essential functions.

Chancellor Zumberge told the Faculty Senate, "The action you take here today is important to the future of the university."

In the past, he said, the university budget process with the Legislature has been an "irrational one." The new document represents "a very sincere effort to get us away from a very poor approach to budgeting . . . to a sound and rational one."

Description and explanation of university programs will now allow determination of "how much they cost the people of the state," Zumberge said.

To the notion that some faculty may be dismissed if some programs are eliminated, Zumberge said he is beginning from the assumption that "all programs are justified in their existence because they are here."

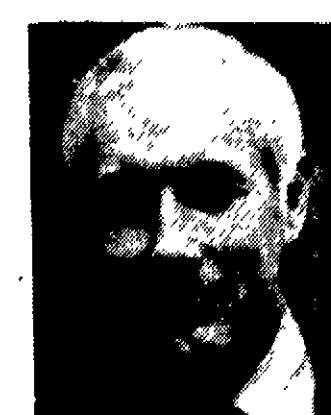

Private insurance companies and other carriers would be used in administration, but the Social Security Administration would have over-all supervision and control.

Mills said the new bill was designed to cost about $40 billion, roughly the same as the administration's.

"The overwhelming majority of American people wouldn't have to pay one dollar in addition," Kennedy told a news conference.

"They would pay less," Mills said.

The Kennedy-Mills bill's catastrophic illness ceiling of $1,000 per family each year compares with the administration's ceilings of $1,500.

Fuel Crisis Said 'Boon' To Pamida

Omaha (AP) — Pamida, Inc., officials look on the fuel shortage as a boon to the Gibson discount chain, which they say gleaned more profit per dollar of sales last year than perhaps any, other discounter in the country.

Pamida president Lee Wegener said the company has felt no ill effects and may even stand to benefit from the scarce, high-priced fuel situation.

With its stores located in rural towns, Pamida is better able to cope with an economic slowdown than its urban competitors, he said.

"We're out in farm country and farmers don't lose their jobs or go on strike — and they've got money to spend."

"I think the energy situation will keep more farmers out of city shopping areas. They'll more likely shop near home than drive 100 miles to Omaha when the speed limit is 55 and gas prices are high."

Pamida, which operates 168 stores in 12 states, last week reported net earnings of $6.4 million, or 70 cents a share, on sales of $158.4 million for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31.

The earnings, 4% of sales, represent "the best net profit of any similar business in the United States," said Board Chairman D. J. Witherspoon.

Release of the earnings figure, 29.4% higher than the previous year, hasn't had too much effect on the price of the company's stock, which sagged badly in 1973.

Pamida's stock price, at $5.50 a share when earnings were announced, rose to a high of $6.38 during the week but closed at $5.75 Monday.

Witherspoon said he had no comment on the stock performance. "That (the stock market) isn't our business," he said.

Open Door Conditionally Funded

The Lincoln Foundation executive committee Tuesday approved conditionally an application for a $17,000 grant for the Family Service Association (FSA) to fund the Open Door Health Center program for nine months.

John H. Frey, Lincoln Foundation executive director, said the action is subject to approval by the FSA board to merge its services with the Open Door program.

According to a further condition, the Lincoln Foundation will fund the grant on a 90-day basis, after which time it will review the program and decide on continued funding.

Frey said the FSA board will meet Friday to consider merging with Open Door.

The health center has been funded on a short-term basis by the city from revenue sharing money. City officials had advised Open Door to merge its activities with a community organization that already had an existing funding base.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf vetoed City Council action to extend Open Door's funding on an extension basis, stipulating the center should seek a merger. The council, in separate action, voted to sustain funds for 30 days instead.

Meanwhile, an attempt failed to merge Open Door with the Malone Community Center.

In other action at its special meeting, the Lincoln Foundation executive committee dis-

TRURO, Nova Scotia (AP) — Sarah May Christie never approved of giving women the vote. Then at age 98, she decided to try it just for the experience. But her candidate died and she stayed home, still saying: "Women do whatever their husbands do, so what's the point of giving them the vote?"

April Will Be Busy For International Clubs

Wednesday, April 3, 1974 The Lincoln Star 25

By H. J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

April will be a very busy month for some of the various international clubs in Lincoln.

Members say the clubs are based on few gatherings and lots of individual work by the members. But April will be an event-filled month for the "uneventful" clubs.

An international banquet set for Sunday night boasts dishes prepared by 40 foreign students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Diners will have their choice of specialties from 14 countries, including China, France, Mexico, India, Turkey and Nigeria.

The dinner is sponsored by the International Club, a group of foreign and American students.

Saturday, the Lincoln Host Family Association is sponsoring a day-long workshop on intercultural understanding — a "deep look at what happens between people of different cultures," according to one of its organizers, Carlton Paine.

Three UNL students who will participate in this program are Alaf Malik of Pakistan, Judith-Anne Sadler of Jamaica and Farhad Delirie of Iran.

Since the emphasis of these and other international clubs is on the importance of people rather than on events or meetings, it is why so many members stay in the programs and why members they participate in more than one club, according to Ms. Rowena Boykin, UNL foreign student adviser.

200 Members

There are about 200 members in the Host Family Association, she said. Each has selected one to four foreign students to "host" while they study in Lincoln.

The Mayor's Committee for International Friendship is heading for its busy season, according to chairperson Ms. Judy Wendorff.

Lincoln's is one of 85 committees in the United States which exist to make sure foreign visitors, who often come with a purpose, see what they came to see.

Twenty-five committee members plan schedules for more than 200 foreign visitors a year, Ms. Wendorff said. But they depend on more than 250 other Lincolmites for information and assistance in their areas of expertise.

The Lincoln group now supplies letters in all interstate reststops for foreign visitors, inviting them to use the club's services, Ms. Wendorff said. It is now organizing a "Language Bank," she said, for which they hope to find people who can speak all the major languages and who are willing to be "on call" should a non-English speaking visitor need some help. The Lincoln MCIF is also helping Omaha nad Grand Island organize their own committees, she said.

Regular Meetings

An International Women's Group does, unlike the other groups, meet regularly.

Chairwoman Mrs. Mary Merker said, however, that all sessions are informal "tea and talk" times for the 175 women who participate.

The daytime and evening sessions serve two purposes, she said, to help foreign women around in a strange town, and "to learn from each other."

Discussions have ranged from child-raising and marriage to recipes during the club's 10 years of meetings, Mrs. Merker said.

Foreign guests are referred to these groups in several ways.

Letters Sent

The UNL Foreign Student Of-

fice sends students letters about the Host Family Association before the student has even left home, according to Peter Levitov, another UNL foreign student counselor.

The office also sends the association a list of students, he said, so it may plan how many visitors it must accommodate.

Few students respond from their homeland, Levitov said, because few of them understand the program. So the office offers to explain it to them again, and about half choose to join, he said.

"Our foremost policy is to respect the maturity of foreign students," Levitov said. "So we force nothing on them. Participation is strictly voluntary."

Host families then set-up arrangements with their guest. The two had been matched according to their interests and schedules, Levitov said. Some choose to meet weekly, some much less frequently.

'Substitute Family'

"But I think it does provide a substitute family and kind of communication outlets students want and need," he said.

The MCIF gets most of its guests public or private agencies working for the U.S. State Department, which, Ms. Wendorff said, selects most foreign visitors.

But some guests are simply visiting friends of foreign residents in Lincoln, she said, who've asked for the MCIF's services.

Lincoln residents, college age to retired people, then set to work, planning a schedule to include Lincoln sites of interest to the visitor.

Unfairness Charged

Pittsburgh (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Press Co., closed by a strike of Teamsters Local 211, filed unfair labor charges against the union.

Many come to study agriculture, she said. Some are interested in the Educational Television Network and its Great Plains library of tapes. And some are foreign journalists, she said, who want to get away from the coasts and talk to people they consider to be the more typical of America.

Any Women Can Join

The International Women's Group is open to any women who wish to join, Mrs. Merker said. The group gets the names of female foreign students and wives of male foreign students from the foreign student offices of UNL, Nebraska Wesleyan University and Union College.

International groups are important, Ms. Wendorff said, because visitors and hosts alike have much to learn from one another.

Lessons are sometimes not what you'd expect, though, she said.

A visitor from Kenja, an ex-British colony in Africa, joked with her once that his countrymen could take heart in the progress of the United States.

They had gone to British schools, he told her, so had learned nothing of the United States after the revolutionary war with Britain.

"I'm glad to see you're doing alright," he said.

Insurance Plan To Save Money

. . . For Lancaster County

Lancaster County stands to save $1,000 under a new insurance plan approved by the County Board Tuesday.

The board accepted the low bid of $5,225 submitted by Alexander & Alexander to provide liability insurance coverage for 99 county vehicles.

That amounts to around a $1,000 reduction from last year's comparable bill, University of Nebraska professor Dr. Leonard Berekson said.

The plan submitted by Alexander & Alexander for Pacific Indemnity Corp. is the first step toward revamping the county's various insurance programs.

In February the commissioners hired Berekson and Dr. Roy Loudon to develop a comprehensive risk management program for Lancaster County.

In a report to the board last February Berekson pointed out the county's policies need re-examination. He cited inadequate filing systems, overlapping coverage, uncoordinated effective policy dates and little forethought to deductibles.

And it is the elimination of some duplicate coverage on the 99 vehicles which will save the county a little over $1,000, he said.

Berekson said he was quite pleased that seven companies submitted bids for the vehicle coverage, including:

Alexander & Alexander for Hawkeye Insurers, Mid-Continent Insurers for Hawkeye Insurers, Gene Schaffer Insurance Co., Chambers-Dobson for Cornhusker Casualty Co., Stuart Insurance Co. for Ohio Casualty and Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

In other business the board:

—Approved purchase agreement with Henry Bloom for 44 acres of land near S. 14th and "Turnpike Corner."

—Placed on file report of County Engineer Walter Hoppe that the Village of Roca should provide its own stop signs.

—Approved tax refund for Alfred and Ella Kubes for $2.96.

—Approved official bond of Oren Bruns, secretary-treasurer of Benet Rural Fire District.

—Approved application of Leland and John Hittner for subdivision permit on N. 40th.

—Referred application of Leah and T. Clement Gaughan for Bottle Club License for Flame Club (with Clem's Fireside Inn), 540 W. Van Dorn.

—Delayed action one week on agreement with city for landfill site.

They Caught The Wrong One

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Lawrence Gomez Lopez, born Sept. 9, 1934, went to Orange County to pay a traffic fine.

Officers checked and found that Lawrence Gomez Lopez, born Sept. 9, 1934, was wanted in Ventura County as a parole violator.

Hauled into two jails, Lopez insisted during four days behind bars that he was the wrong man. Then he told it to the judge, Robert L. Shaw of Superior Court. The judge ordered a fingerprint check.

Now Lawrence Gomez Lopez carries a certification that he is not the Lopez wanted for parole violation.

Mrs. Gradwohl Named Judge

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday named Mrs. Janice Gradwohl Lincoln's fourth municipal Court judge.

Mrs. Gradwohl, a deputy Lancaster County attorney since 1965, is the third woman judge named by Exon. The two previous woman appointees are Omaha Municipal Judge Elizabeth Pittman and Second District Judge Betty Sharp.

Mrs. Gradwohl, a 1964 University of Nebraska Law School graduate, was chosen from a field of 13 candidates. The Judicial Nominating Commission narrowed the field last Saturday to Mrs. Gradwohl and Richard Schmeling for Exon's consideration.

As a municipal judge, Mrs.

Gradwohl will come under the merit plan and cannot be challenged by another candidate in an election.

Prior to joining the county attorney's staff in 1965, she practiced with the firm of Kier, Cobb and Luedtke.

She is the mother of three and is married to John Gradwohl, a University of Nebraska law professor.

Bryan Official Scores Economic Control Bills

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

"The extension of economic controls over the health care field threatens Bryan (Memorial) Hospital's ability to provide quality patient care," said hospital president Eugene G. Edwards.

Edwards made the statement in a letter to all Bryan employees, medical staff, lab employees, volunteers, chaplaincy staff and student nurses.

He urged they write congressional delegations and committees and the President, asking defeat of three bills now before Congress "which can have a disastrous effect on health care."

Those bills, Edwards said, are:

—S3032, "a Nixon Administration bill which would have the effect of continuing economic controls just for the health industry."

—S2961, which "would give to the President the authority to continue controls on a selective basis in those industries where he deems it necessary."

—And HR13206, which "provides for a one-year extension of existing authority under economic stabilization."

In an interview Tuesday, Edwards said, "When everybody was under controls, we didn't mind," but we now object to limitations on charges the hospital can make, when other areas of the economy have been deregulated.

"Our cash flow has been diminishing for the last year," he said. "We need some relief or we're going to be in serious problems."

Edwards said price increases for some items range from 30-50%, and added the most notable cost hikes have come in equipment made of plastic (the prices "went wild," he said) and in dietary items.

Increases in hospital charges are limited to 6% a year under Phase III guidelines, with allowance for a percentage of volume flow, he said.

Costs at Bryan last year of about $5 million means that "if $300,000 would be the most that we could generate by raising our rates 6%," as allowed, Edwards said, Bryan would have to absorb any costs beyond that.

Further, the federal formula for Medicare payments places a limit of 7½%, Edwards said, again Bryan must absorb them.

Asked what alternatives Bryan has, Edwards replied, "Cut back on the type of service we give."

According to feedback from Washington, he said "legislators have been very sympathetic" but he could not predict the outcome of the three pending bills.

His Secret Is Onion A Day

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Ernest A. Smith turned 100 last week. He says his secret is eating at least one raw onion a day, sometimes two or three.

"I've been quite a ham for onions," Smith says proudly, and he points to the example set by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who Smith says once held up his army for two days to wait for an onion supply.

Smith's doctor told him 15 years ago that he still had at least 25 years left. What does the doctor say now?

"I don't know," says Smith. "He is dead and gone."

In his letter urging opposition to the bills, Edwards wrote: "To be subject to continuing cost-price ceilings in an inflationary economy will be the economic collapse of many hospitals, if not the voluntary hospital system."

Receipts and expenditures are effectively controlled by Phase IV regulations, which attempt also "to allocate types and levels of care (and) substitute bureaucratic mandate for sound medical judgment," he said.

Because hospitals try to contain health care costs, "to single hospitals out to be subjected to an ill-founded and crushingly burdensome program of economic controls is immoral, if not illegal, and must not be further tolerated."

Edwards said freezing health care costs "will tend to depress salaries and wages" while there is an "intensified" need for qualified personnel.

He maintained that health care controls can result in low quality patient care.

The State Hospital Association is urging defeat of the bills in Congress, Edwards said, and has sent information on the legislation to all hospitals in Nebraska.

Bryan Personnel Director Jerry L. Sellentin Tuesday got about 300 signatures of hospital staff and employees on a petition, to send with an open letter to Congress and the President.

That letter asks for defeat of extension of the economic controls over the health care field.

Sellentin said too Bryan administrators are "encouraged" by the employee and staff response to the appeal to write letters to Washington, noting their judgment of the issues at stake.

NU WINS TWIN BILL

Eymann Aids NU In Relief

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

If there's one thing Kirk Eymann is not, it's a blazing fastball pitcher.

But he is effective with off-speed pitches and curve balls. And that's the method he employed in two relief assignments Tuesday afternoon at the NU Diamond as the Huskers swept a baseball doubleheader from Morningside College.

"We really needed those wins," Eymann said, understating the Huskers' bleak 0-11 record entering their first home games this season. "I relied on curve balls — they didn't seem to hit the off-speed pitch too well."

"I kind of like coming in on relief. I've been mostly a starter before in high school and it's a change of pace because I'm not the change of pitcher who's going to come in and throw it past them."

Nevertheless, it was the first time the left-handed freshman from Papillion achieved two pitching victories in one day.

In the first game, he hurled two innings of hitless, runless baseball as Nebraska scored an 8-5 victory. A solo home run by catcher Ron Miltenberger and a two-run single by starting pitcher Dennis O'Doherty highlighted a five-run second inning.

For good measure, he tossed 1 1/3 innings of hitless, runless pitching at the Sioux City, Iowa, squad in the second game as Nebraska edged the Chiefs, 4-3 to send Morningside to an 0-7 record.

Despite Eymann's effectiveness, Nebraska coach Tony Sharpe said the Huskers need the 5-9 145-pounder in relief roles.

"You've got to have someone in the bullpen," Sharpe said. "Overall, I thought we played much better. Of course, they (Morningside) weren't as good as some of the teams we played in Texas, but it's always nice to win. I'm sure the kids were glad to be home."

Besides Eymann, Sharpe also was pleased with the pitching of Randy Benish, a right-hander from Norfolk, who originally signed to attend Nebraska on a football scholarship.

Benish tossed three innings of runless ball, allowing only one hit in the second game. Sharpe said the sophomore earned a starting berth in Friday's second game of a doubleheader here against the defending Big Eight champion Oklahoma Sooners.

"I'm still disappointed in Buehrer and Wetterberg," Sharpe noted. "They didn't look too good today."

Larry Wetterberg, who compiled a fine 1.82 earned-run-average last season and a 2-1 record, was ineffective in the two innings he pitched in the 8-5 win.

He was tagged for three earned runs — a three run homer over the centerfield wall by pitcher-leftfielder Steve Zediker in the fifth inning which narrowed the Nebraska lead to 6-5.

Dave Buehrer, who achieved a 5-1 record with a 2.06 ERA last season, was hit for three runs (two of them earned) in less than three innings.

"I think Eymann will get even better when he gets his feet on the ground and gets a little more confidence," Sharpe said. "He's a good little reliever and I'm sure we'll use him even more."

The Huskers also need more hitting punch. They scored single runs in the fifth and sixth frames of the second game without a hit.

NU talked in the fifth inning for a 3-1 lead on a walk, stolen base, wild pitch and passed ball. The sixth-inning run, which proved to be the winner, was scored by two errors and a fielder's choice.

Overall, Nebraska scored its four runs on three hits.

But, the wins snapped the longest opening-season losing spell in Sharpe's 28 years as Nebraska coach.

The task of winning won't become any easier, however. Oklahoma, a participant in last summer's College World Series at Omaha, invades Lincoln for a Friday doubleheader and a Saturday single game.

Buffalo Bounces Boston

BUFFALO (AP) — The young Buffalo Braves, getting a superb performance from seven players, whipped the Boston Celtics 115-106 Tuesday night and tied their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference playoffs at one game apiece.

While Bob McAdoo, the NBA's leading scorer with a 30.6 season average was held to 23 points, his teammates took up the slack and led the Celtics throughout most of the game.

The Celtics, winners of the opening playoff game Saturday, 107-97, in Boston, went ahead for the first time early in the third period, 56-55, on a three-point play by Jo Jo White. The teams battled back-and-forth until they were knotted at 73-73. Then McAdoo chipped in a two-point shot with about 4 1/2 minutes to go in the third period to put the Braves ahead to stay.

Gar Heard added 20 points for Buffalo.

The Braves jumped into a 31-19 first-quarter lead, despite 10 points by Boston's Don Nelson and led 51-49 at the half as Celtics reserve Paul Westphal came through with 10 second-period points.

White paced the Celtics with 27 points while Dave Cowens, who killed the Braves Saturday with 30 points, was held to 14.

The teams meet in the third game Wednesday night in Boston.

NU's Netters Host Kansas

Nebraska's tennis team, with a dual record of 0-10 after last week's trip through Oklahoma, returns home Wednesday for a 1:30 p.m. match against Kansas at Woods Tennis Courts, 33rd and J St.

"Kansas has a good tennis team," Husker tennis coach Jim Porter said. "They've been really recruiting and have picked up some great players." The Jayhawks defeated Nebraska last year 9-0.

Last week, when the Huskers finished with an 0-3 dual record during the Oral Roberts Tournament, Kansas reached the tournament's semifinals before losing to Arkansas.

On Saturday at Woods, Nebraska will host Missouri at 9 a.m. and Kansas State at 1 p.m. Last year, Nebraska lost to Missouri 9-0 and was beaten by Kansas State 7-2.

Everybody's A Critic

Spring fever — that mysterious ailment that seeps into winter-weary bones and affects the minds of sportsmen, sending them into giddy stages of predictions and analysis of past-greats, near-greats and future-greats. It affects us all, but nothing like the patrons of "Mother's", an affectionate name for a favorite waterhole patronized by many.

In this dimly-lit haven for sportsmen, winter-lashed sports expatriots and fans gather to quaff frosty cools and offer their opinion of Nebraska football. Before and after home games, the joint is packed with seething humanity, each individual clad in red and white, elbow-to-elbow, jostling, sneering, swearing, and holding in reverence, one song on the juke box that plays the Nebraska fight song over and over again to booming chants of GO-BIG-RED!

The rest of the year seems normal enough with the exception of a huge round oaken table near the back that resembles something from King Arthur's days. Here, sit the denizens of the bleachers holding court on what Tom Osborne & Crew have accomplished or haven't. What they have is commonly agreed upon: A hell of a football team. What they haven't is a national champion.

"We need another Bob Devaney," says one. "How can you win football games with a Sunday schoolteacher?"

"Awww, go pipe it out your nose," a Osborne supporter growls back. "He's doing okay. What we need is a twin-running back attack."

"What we need are more receivers," another chimes in.

"Now, we need a tougher defense."

"You're all crazy. We need a new offense. That old I-back formation was good, but now it's washed-up. Everyone knows how to defense against it."

"Awww go pipe it out your nose... what we really need... how about... let's try..." "Nuts. What we need is less criticism and more patience. If guys like you would just wait and see what he can do... stoney glances. So silent you can hear the bar glasses click in the booths."

Maybe it is time of us to consider a different offense. How about a backfield with both Tony Davis and John O'Leary?

"Now you're talking young man. That's what we need." Yessir, by Jimmy, that's what we need. That's why I'm sitting here having a couple of quiet belts while Osborne & Crew are earning their wages beating their brains out trying to come up with a new gimmick. Yessir.

"You're in the business, don't you disagree with the coaches on some of their calls?" Well, it's easy to sit down a few hours later and criticize what had to be a split-second decision. That's a damned-if-you-do and damned-if-you-don't situation.

I gotta admit, though, a running attack with O'Leary and Davis back there would seem to be great, but it could end up being an awfully dull game. Five yards and a cloud of dust can bore a guy to death. And how about Dave Humm? One of the top tossers in the nation?

"You've gotta have somebody to throw to." I don't need that. That's pretty obvious. Any nitwit can figure that out. What you really need is a balanced offense. Now there's another bright statement.

But it gets awfully boring to keep hearing criticism heaped on a guy who's quite willing to take a few gambles. Especially some of those on fourth downs. And a guy who does that can't be all bad, right?

Plainsmen Baseball Team To Entertain South Dakota

Nebraska Wesleyan's baseball team will play before a home crowd Wednesday afternoon at Sherman Field for the first time this season.

The Plainsmen, 6-5, are scheduled to start at 2 with Central City sophomore Larry Abel, 4-0 and Dan Claus, 1-0, against South Dakota in a non-conference doubleheader.

Coach Ron Bachman's Capital

City team is the co-defending champions in the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Claus, a Beatrice native, threw a no-hitter in his first collegiate start and will be one of three freshmen on the field for NWU.

Former Lincoln High standout Gene Lessman is the starting catcher, John Crose at first base, Grand Island Northwest senior Gene Boeka at second and Lincoln East senior Ross Stephenson at third.

More 'Name' Players On North All-Star Cagers Than South

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

The North may have used the theme last year. But Lincoln Southeast basketball coach Wally McNaught conceivably could use it again this summer when he directs the South team in the Nebraska Coaches Association All-Star Basketball Game.

Even though he has Sunday Journal and Star Super Staters Curt Hedberg of Lincoln East and Larry Vaculik of Omaha Ryan, McNaught might be able to call his Rebels a "no name" team.

No name, that is, in comparison to Fremont coach Al Babe's North all-stars, who also boast a pair of Super Staters in Lincoln Northeast's Terry Novak and Lexington's Pat Hodges.

The North, however, also has six first team Sunday Journal and Star all-stars. The South has only three all-stars for the sixth annual all-star contest Aug. 16 in Lincoln.

Joining Novak and Hodges on the North team are first team all-stars Mick Higley of Fremont (Class A), Kyle Hand of Alliance and Doug Wolf of Ord (Class B), Lenny Adams of West Point and Tom Ritzdorf of Howells (Class C) and Palmer's Russell Thede (Class D).

Embellishing the North's better known individual reputation are three more players who gained spots on the Sunday Journal and Star's Super State team, indicative of Nebraska's top 15 high school basketball players.

Those Yankee selections are Jeff Elmore of Omaha Benson and Scott Hawk and Kevin Kuehl of second-ranked Creighton Prep.

High-scoring Kevin O'Connor of Class C North Platte St. Pat's is the other player on the 12-man North roster.

McNaught, who helped organize the all-star classic, hopes he has the flexibility to snap a 3-year South losing streak in the contest, matching graduating high school seniors.

East's Hedberg and Ryan's Vaculik, each of whom is 6-8, are capable outside threats and could see considerable action at the wing position as well as at center.

The trio of first team all-stars joining the 6-8 pivots on the South roster includes Aurora's Dave Hahn from Class B and Class D standouts Tim Hoy of Falls City Sacred Heart and Don Peck of Paxton.

Three others who gained a spot among the top three Super State teams landed a South all-star berth. They are Omaha Central's Mike Ashford, Bellevue's Greg Nagel and Lincoln Southeast's Rick Reynolds.

Although Reynolds is listed as a forward, he can and has played every position during his high school career. He finished the final half of his senior season at center.

Reynolds, the son of former Nebraska all-American halfback Bobby Reynolds, was also a standout football end and kicker and ranks as one of the state's top prep golfers.

Novak, son of another former Cornhusker all-American—center Tom Novak—twice gained first team Super State recognition, having helped lead the Rockets to the 1973 state championship. He's also a standout quarter-miler, half-miler in track.

Novak is the second member of his family to gain an all-star basketball berth. Brother Tom, a starting guard on this year's Nebraska basketball team, participated in the 1970 all-star game.

Hedberg, who led East to city and Trans-Nebraska Conference titles and a state runnerup finish this season, is described by Spartan coach Paul Forch as an unselfish player.

"He ranked second on the team in assists," Forch points out.

Hedberg averaged 20 points and 15 rebounds a game this season while hitting 52 per cent from the field. Forch also notes that Hedberg is an excellent student in the classroom and a knowledgeable basketball student "who truly loves the game."

Omaha Central's Jim Martin will assist McNaught in coaching the South team and Schuyler's Jay Murna will be Babe's North aide.

The South all-stars will begin training camp Aug. 8 at Kearney State College. The North, which leads the series, 3-2, begins workouts the same day at Wayne State College.

Kearney St. District NSAA Financial Boon

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

Quality competition breeds exceptional interest, which in turn, can produce financial rewards.

At least that's what appears to have been the case this year in the Class B-6 district basketball tournament at Kearney State College.

Four then rated teams—Lexington, Cozad, Aurora and Holdrege—were involved in the district, which produced the largest gross receipts in the state, according to the Nebraska School Activities Association's (NSAA) annual basketball financial report.

The event grossed $13,936, unseating Lincoln's Class A-1 district at Pershing Auditorium as the NSAA's most prolific district money-maker.

Minnesota Romps Past Boston, 13-0

By The Associated Press
The Minnesota Twins pulled themselves out of an eight-game losing streak Tuesday, pounding out 18 hits, including four by rookie shortstop Sergio Ferrer, to trounce the Boston Red Sox 13-0 in exhibition baseball.

Ferrer had a triple, double, and a pair of singles, while Steve Brye had three hits and four others had two apiece as the Twins posted only their fourth victory in 25 pre-season games.

Bill Hands, Bill Campbell and Vic Albry combined to blank the Red Sox on three hits.

The Oakland A's broke out of their five-game losing streak as Sal Bando drove in three runs with a homer and a triple to pace an 8-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

A's starter Vida Blue held the Indians to two hits through six innings before he weakened in the seventh.

The Cincinnati Reds edged the Chicago White Sox 7-6, helped by Ken Griffey's ninth-inning single which drove in Darrel Chaney.

Griffey had put the Reds ahead 6-5 in the seventh with a two-run homer before the White Sox tied the score on an unearned run in the ninth.

Kurt Bvaqua's three-run home run highlighted a five-run eighth inning which helped the Pittsburgh Pirates take a 10-2 victory over a split Philadelphia Phillies squad.

The Pirates got 17 hits off three Philadelphia pitchers, including a homer by Willie Stargell and three hits each by Manny Sanguillen and Gene Cline.

Another Phillies squad had better luck against the St. Louis Cardinals, winning 8-4 after shelling starting pitcher Alan Foster for nine hits. The Phils scored two runs in the first inning and then clinched the victory with three runs in the third and three more in the fourth.

Dave Rosello's sacrifice fly brought in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as the Chicago Cubs trimmed the Milwaukee Brewers 11-10.

Creighton Gets Pair

Omaha — Creighton swept a doubleheader from Kansas State Monday afternoon, 4-3 and 5-1, with the aid of a first-game three-run homer by Ron Thornam and the three-hit second-game pitching of Gary McCabe.

Creighton is now 12-5 on the season.
